

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	v
Editors' Introduction	vii
Preface	ix
1. Introduction	1
Anthropology and Organizational Research	2
Hawthorne and the History of Organizational Research	3
The Field and Fieldwork: Cultures From the Inside Out	3
Organization of the Book	4
2. What Happened at Hawthorne?	5
The Hawthorne Studies	5
Interpreting the Results	12
Summary: The Methodological Message of Hawthorne	17
3. What Happened to Anthropology?	18
Anthropology and Industry: Early Studies	19
W. Lloyd Warner and Yankee City	20
Reactions to Anthropologists in Industry, Business, and Bureaucracy	23
Summary: Human Relations—Methods and Models	25
4. Studying Up and Studying Down	27
The Anthropology of Work:	27
Shop Floors and World Systems
Studying Organizational Culture	33
A Turn Toward Routines:	36
From Organizations to Organizing
Interpreting Meetings	38
Interpreting Stories	43
Summary: Micro/Macro Ethnographies	45

5. Fieldwork Roles and Fieldwork Processes	47
Access, Entry, and First Encounters	48
Roles and Research	52
Context Analysis	53
Observations and Interviews:	54
Looking for Natural Questions and Answers	58
Ethnographic Interviews	63
Analyzing Events and Routines	66
Hearing Voices and Representing Them:
Experiments in Writing Organizational Ethnographies	72
Summary
6. Conclusion	73
References	76
About the Author	83