

Contents

Tables	x
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: Birth as a Rite of Passage	1
Research Methods and Theoretical Concerns	2
Ritual and Rite	7
1. One Year: The Stages of the Pregnancy/Childbirth Rite of Passage	22
Separation: "Oh my God, I Think I'm Pregnant!"	22
Transition: Pregnancy as Transformation	23
Transition: Birth as Transformation	38
Transition: The Immediate Postpartum Period	40
Integration: "Swimming Up on the Other Side"	41
2. The Technocratic Model: Past and Present	44
Medicine as a Microcosm of American Society	45
The Body as Machine	48
The Technocratic Model of Birth	51
The Role of American Obstetrics in the Resolution of Cultural Anomaly	59

3. Birth Messages	73
“Standard Procedures for Normal Birth”	73
A Symbolic Analysis of Standard Obstetrical Procedures	75
From Nature to Culture: The Obstetrical Re-Structuring of Accidental Out-of-Hospital Births	150
Summary: Birth Rituals and Society	152
4. Belief Systems About Birth: The Technocratic, Wholistic, and Natural Models	154
The Significance of Belief	154
The Wholistic Model of Birth	155
The Technocratic and Wholistic Models of Birth Compared	158
“Natural” Models of Birth	159
The Ideology of Safety	177
The Alternative Birth Center: A Middle Ground?	184
5. How the Messages Are Received: The Spectrum of Response	187
Full Acceptance of the Technocratic Model of Birth	189
Full Acceptance of the Wholistic Model of Birth	199
Women-In-Between	206
6. Scars into Stars: The Reinterpretation of the Childbirth Experience	241
Compartmentalization	242
“Further Epistemic Exploration”: “Teilhard de Chardin” versus “Sartre”	243
7. Obstetric Training as a Rite of Passage	252
Methods	252
Processes of Psychological Transformation: Medical School and Residency	254
Alternative Transformations: The Humanistic Paradigm	269
Women in Obstetrics	276
Obstetrics and American Society	277

8. The Computerized Birth? Some Ritual and Political Implications for the Future	281
The Cultural Consensus	281
Women's Rites: The Politics of Birth	284
The Technocratic Model of Birth: Futuristic Extremes	286
9. —Or Birth as the Biodance?	292
Birth as a Means for Accomplishing a Paradigm Shift	292
Wholism in Birth: Futuristic Extremes	294
The Computerized Birth, and the Biodance: Envisioning the Richness of Diversity	301
Conclusion	305
Appendix A
Interview Questions Asked of Mothers	309
Appendix B
Interview Questions Asked of Obstetricians	313
Notes	317
References	331
Index	369

Tables

1. The Technocratic and Wholistic Models of Birth Compared	160
2. “Prepared” versus “Natural” Childbirth: A Comparison of the Philosophies of Lamaze and Dick-Read	164
3. The Spectrum of Women’s Responses to Their Birth Experiences	239
4. A Spacetime Model of Birth, Life, Health, and Death	297