

Contents

Foreword	xiii
Introduction	xv
Preface to the third edition	xvii
Acknowledgements	xix
1 Internationalization: a necessity not a luxury, but does corporate behaviour reflect it?	1
The concept of advantage	1
Where is the nation state?	1
Analysing national competitiveness	4
Governments and national comparative advantage	6
The hierarchy of free trade and integration	8
The new trading regions of the world	9
From economic advantage to marketing advantage	9
How companies 'go international'	15
Porter's prescription for competitiveness	17
The dilemma of the multinational – a force for good or evil?	17
International marketing mythology	19
International marketing reality	22
Issues surrounding management control	22
Network explanations for internationalization	23
Random walk approach	23
Exporting marketing and international marketing	23
Export behaviour reviewed	23
Psychological commitment and resource allocation	25
Incremental internationalization	27
Organization for internationalization	27
Life cycle for international trade: beyond its sell-by date?	28
Dunning's eclectic approach and later revision	36
International marketing and the Internet	36
Revision questions	37
References	38
Web sites	39
2 Environmental market scanning: the 'SLEPT' and 'C' factors	42
The social environment (S)	43
The cultural dimension	44
Defining the meaning of culture	45
Assessing the cultural environment	49
Rokeach value survey	50
Semiotics and the science of meaning of signs	53
The legal environment (L)	55
The economic environment (E)	56
Defining the market	57
From General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) to
World Trade Organization (WTO)	59
The World Trade Organization	62
Tariff barriers	65
Non-tariff barriers (NTBs)	65
The political environment (P)	65
Government procurement and corporate 'buy-national' policies	65
Dumping	67
Does anyone still practise unregulated 'free trade'?	68
The Triad of Europe, North America and Japan	70

Technological dimensions (T)	71
The company looks at international markets	71
International risk perception	71
Political and economic risk appreciation	73
Business Environment Risk Intelligence (BERI)	74
The country environmental temperature gradient	75
Target market-selection decisions	82
International market segmentation	82
Primary sources of information	83
Secondary sources of information	84
Data interpretation problems	85
Revision questions	88
Key reading on foreign market research	89
References	91
Web sites	92
3 Exporting – not just for the small business	96
Why export?	96
Exporting by the risk averse	96
Defining the small business	97
Problems for small exporters	106
Perceptions of non-exporting small firms	108
Identifying the exporter	110
Factors in the exporting success of small firms	112
Using networks	114
The exporting consortium alternative	116
Forming an exporting consortium	117
Attracting more small firms into exporting	118
Improving the trading environment	118
Simplifying trading operations	119
Revision questions	120
References	121
Web sites	122
4 Market entry modes: strategic considerations of direct vs. indirect involvement	125
Company resources and objectives	125
Selecting a market entry mode	126
The keyboard analogy	128
Direct exporting activities	133
Agents	134
Distributors	134
Similarities between agents and distributors	135
Management contracts	137
Franchising	138
Licensing	144
'Screwdriver' assembly operations	150
Direct investment activities	154
Wholly owned subsidiaries	154
Merger/acquisition	156
Joint venture	156
Tripartite ventures	174
Foreign market servicing strategies	174
Monitoring market entry modes	174
Relationship management and interaction theory	175
International studies related to interaction theory	180
A strategic portfolio of market entry modes	181
Conclusions	181
Revision questions	181

References	182
Web sites	184
5 International product policy considerations	188
What may sell abroad	188
Communication issues – language and media	195
Modification versus standardization – the issues	198
Product modification	202
Product standardization	203
Product standardization and World Product Mandates	208
Branding	213
Selecting a brand name	223
Types of branding	223
Packaging	227
Intellectual property	228
Industrial property rights	229
Compulsory licences and the abuse of patent rights: the Canadian case	230
Brand names and trademark protection	231
Brand piracy (product counterfeiting)	235
Five corporate strategies to handle counterfeiting	238
Distribution of counterfeit goods	238
Parallel or ‘grey’ exporting	239
After-sales expectations and service	239
Appendix: Dilmah and the history of Ceylon tea	240
Revision questions	246
References	246
Web sites	248
6 Pricing, credit and terms of doing business	252
Domestic and international price setting	252
Consumer sensitivity to pricing	256
A multi-stage approach to pricing	256
International price standardization	256
Parallel or grey exporting	259
Export market overheads	264
Export quotation terms	266
Foreign currency invoicing and financing	269
Methods of payment	272
Payment in advance	272
Open account	272
Bills of exchange	272
Letter of credit	272
Leasing	273
Bonding	273
Discounting and factoring	274
Forfaiting	274
Countertrade (CT)	275
Bilateral trading clearing account	277
Bartering	277
Switch trading or triangular trade	278
Escrow account trading	278
Evidence accounts	278
Compensation trading	278
Buyback	278
Parallel trading (or counterpurchase)	278
Industrial offset trading	279
Swap trading	279
Transfer pricing	279
Conspiracy to fix prices	281

Cartels	283
Revision questions	284
References	284
Web sites	285
7 Strategic international logistical and distribution decisions	287
Natural channels of distribution	287
Distribution channels in the Information Age	287
Virtual value chain vs. physical value chain	288
Logistics	288
Movement of goods across frontiers	289
Marketing logistics	292
Trade procedures and documentation	293
INCOTERMS 1990	293
Distribution efficiency and the national environment	294
Changing customer perceptions	298
Marketing intermediaries	298
Identifying marketing intermediaries	300
Parallel or 'grey' exporting	301
Freeports	304
The freeport advantage	305
Distribution in the PLC stages	306
Revision questions	308
References	308
Web sites	309
8 Promotion within the foreign market	313
The many facets of promotion	314
Personal selling	314
Exhibitions and trade fairs	314
Public relations/publicity	315
Sales promotion	318
Above and below the line	318
Advertising	318
'Pull' and 'push' strategies	319
The communications process	320
Advertising – the global situation	323
Campaign transferability	327
Multinational advertising agencies	332
Advertising agency usage criteria	333
Multinational client/agency relationships	333
The organizational structure adopted by agencies and clients in global campaigns	333
Links with the 'lead' agency	334
Links with the official agency head offices	335
The agency–client link	335
Links within the client's organization	335
Reasons behind the 'mirroring' effect	335
Media availability	336
Pan-European research: readership data	336
Advertising standardization versus local adaptation	337
Newspapers	337
Periodicals	337
The cinema	338
Television	339
Radio	340
Posters	340
Leaflets	340
Point-of-sale materials	340
Direct mail	340
Trade fairs and exhibitions	340

Substantiating advertising claims	341
Product restrictions	342
Balancing information and emotional appeal	342
Use of language	344
Vulnerable groups	345
Legal action	345
Penalties	345
Develop self-discipline	346
Revision questions	346
References	347
Web sites	348
9 International marketing planning: reviewing, appraising and implementing	352
The international marketing plan	352
The limits of standardization	361
Market concentration or market spreading?	362
Planning and Third World markets	364
Responses to irregular payments (did someone say bribery or corruption?)	367
Organizational development to meet market trends	373
Type A – the direct type	373
Type B – the geographical type	374
Type C – the product type	374
Type D – the matrix type	374
Type E – the project type	374
Type F – the mixed structure	374
Williamson's six-way classification scheme for company organization	375
Divisionalization	379
Hierarchy in the organizational framework	379
Bounded rationality	379
Opportunism	379
Uncertainty	379
Small numbers	379
Information impactedness	379
Atmosphere	379
Alternative organizational patterns	384
Relevant control systems	385
The Boston Consulting Group (BCG) product portfolio matrix	385
PIMS database	388
Revision questions	389
References	389
Web sites	391
10 Marketing in Europe	392
Background	393
Historical background	394
Economic size and potential of the Community	396
Marketing by population concentration: the 'Golden Triangle'	398
Regional variation within the Community	399
European Union social policy	399
European Union regional policy	400
Decision-making bodies	401
A market without frontiers	408
Harmonization measures for internal trade	408
Harmonization: the common commercial policy	412
Single Administrative Document	412
TARIC customs tariff	413
Patents, trademarks and standards	413
Competition policy within the EU	413
Common Agricultural Policy (CAP)	415

The 'Euro' currency	417
Financial and technical co-operation	420
Stabilization of export earnings	420
Industrial and agricultural co-operation	421
Institutions	421
Japan and the EU	424
US and the EU	425
Postscript	426
European Economic Area (EEA)	427
Marketing in Central and Eastern Europe	427
Background to the political and economic changes	427
Structural economic change	429
Doing business in Central and Eastern Europe	430
Postscript	436
Revision questions	437
References	438
Web sites	439
11 Marketing in the Pacific Rim	442
APEC and the economic potential of the region	442
China	442
Currency	443
Guanxi	443
Chinese communism and the fall of Soviet communism	443
Economic background to the world's largest market	446
Trading with a decentralizing planned economy	447
Market information	455
Intellectual property protection	455
The Chinese market	455
Special Economic Zones (SEZ)	458
Economic and Technical Development Zones (ETDZ)	459
Chinese foreign investment	460
Investing in a joint-venture project	460
Wholly Foreign-Owned Enterprises (WFOE)	463
Joint-venture dissolution	464
The future	464
Japan	464
Japan in the world economy	464
Reasons for the Japanese moving into foreign markets	466
Economic and social background	467
Shinto	468
Buddhism	468
Christianity and new religions	468
Coming to terms with Japanese growth	468
The Sogo Shosa: Japanese international trading companies	470
Imports into Japan	472
Tariffs	472
Duty assessment	472
Internal taxes	472
Import documentation	472
Transit and bond	472
Distribution in Japan	474
Japanese expectations of suppliers	475
The Japanese consumer	480
Product testing for imports	481
Market prospects for exports to Japan	481
Advertising in Japan	482
Innovation and product development	483
Trademarks and industrial property rights	483

Licensing	484
Foreign investment in Japan	484
Foreign direct investment	484
Joint ventures	485
Strategic business alliances: a better alternative to protectionism	485
The potential for industrial co-operation	487
Pressures on the Japanese financial system	487
The services sector	488
Revision questions	488
References	489
Web sites	491
Index	497