

Preface vii

1	The Repulsion and Attraction of Opposites	1
2	Approaching Heidegger: Celan Reads Being and Time , 1952–1953	9
3	“Connecting” with Heidegger, 1952–1954	22
4	Earliest Traces of Heidegger in Celan’s Works, 1953–1954	31
5	Celan’s Notebook on What Is Called Thinking and Introduction to Metaphysics , 1954	42
6	Doubts Grow and Problems Arise, 1954–1956	56
7	More Appropriations from Heidegger: The Principle of Reason , 1957	68
8	Drawing on and Withdrawing from Heidegger, 1958	81
9	Mounting Cognitive Dissonance, Growing Independence, 1959–1960	92
10	Heidegger as Catalyst: Celan Begins to Write His Own Poetics, 1959–1960	108
11	The Meridian : An “Implicit Dialogue with Heidegger,” 1960	122
12	Descending into the “Loneliest Loneliness,” 1960–1961	135
13	The Dialogue Continues: Heidegger Reads Celan’s “Meridian,” 1960–1961	146

14	"An Epoch-Making Encounter": Freiburg and Todtnauberg, 1967	159
15	"Todtnauberg" and Its Aftermath, 1967-1968	173
16	Heidegger's Thought and Language in Celan: Similarities, Affinities, Borrowings	192
17	Unresolved Contradictions: The Last Years, 1968-1970	202
18	A Conclusion of Sorts	215
	Appendix. Celan's Known Readings of Works by Heidegger	219
	Notes	221
	Works Cited	237
	Index	245

Illustrations appear following page 107