THE ROOTS OF FAKE NEWS

Objecting to Objective Journalism

Brian Winston and Matthew Winston
CONTENTS

Acknowledgements xii

Crisis? 1

Foreword: Roots, fakery, and objectivity 3
‘[L]et us count our spoons’

Roots 15

1 ‘Strange newes’: Printed news 1485—
   ‘The Frightening and Truly Extraordinary Story’ 17

2 ‘Newes’: The coming of the newspaper 1600—
   ‘For the better information of the people’ 33

3 ‘Booming a newspaper’: Newspapers and news-media 1800—
   ‘Many a good newspaper story has been ruined by over-verification’ 50

4 ‘Oh, the humanity!’: Legacy news media 1900—
   ‘The public interest, convenience, or necessity’ 69

5 Online: Digital news 1980—
   ‘I come from Cyberspace, the new home of Mind’ 84
6 'Info wars': News platforms 2000—
   'But journalism is like the most honoured professions in other ways'

Objecting to objectivity

7 Fact: ‘Hard’ science
   'What is behind a scientific text? ... Inscriptions'

8 Fact: ‘Thick’ descriptions
   'Cultural analysis is intrinsically incomplete'

9 Judgement: The legal mindset
   'To collect all the proofs on both sides; to compare them'

10 Judgement: The fine print
   'No provider ... shall be treated as the publisher'

11 Truth: The philosophical approach
   'Journalism by nature is reactive and practical'

12 Truth: Moral philosophy
   'Clear and verifiable links between cause and effect are still lacking'

The fourth estate

13 Shouting fire on a crowded website
   'Don’t confuse me with the facts. I’ve got a closed mind'

14 Speaking truth to power
   '[M]ore important far than they all'

Index