

Contents

List of Illustrations	xi
List of Table	xi
Preface	xii
1. Introduction: The Quest for Principles and Patterns	1
2. Antiquity: The Dawn of the ‘Humanities’	13
2.1 Linguistics: The Birth of Grammar	14
2.2 Historiography: The Source Problem and the Form of the Past	21
2.3 Philology: The Problem of Text Reconstruction	31
2.4 Musicology: The Laws of Harmony and Melody	37
2.5 Art Theory: The Visual Reproduction of the World	44
2.6 Logic: The Rules of Reasoning	52
2.7 Rhetoric: Oratory as a Discipline	58
2.8 Poetics: The Study of Literature and Theatre	65
Conclusion: Common Patterns in the Humanities of the Ancient World	71
3. The Middle Ages: The Universal and the Particular	74
3.1 Linguistics: From Rules to Examples	75
3.2 Historiography: Universal History and Formal Transmission Theory	84
3.3 Philology: Copyists, Encyclopaedists, and Translators	103
3.4 Musicology: The Formalization of Musical Practice	109
3.5 Art Theory: Following and Breaking Rules	118
3.6 Logic: The Laws of True Syllogistics	124
3.7 Rhetoric and Poetics: A Motley Collection of Rules	130
Conclusion: Innovations in the Medieval Humanities	139
4. Early Modern Era: The Unity of the Humanities	142
4.1 Philology: Queen of Early Modern Learning	143
4.2 Historiography: Philology Spreads and the Secularization of the World View	161
4.3 Linguistics and Logic: Under the Yoke of Humanism	184
4.4 Musicology: The Missing Link between Humanism and Natural Science	198
4.5 Art Theory: A Turning Point in the Representation of the Visible World	211
4.6 Rhetoric: The Science of Everything (or Nothing)?	229
4.7 Poetics: Classicism in extremis	233
Conclusion: Was there Progress in the Early Modern Humanities?	240

5. Modern Era: The Humanities Renewed	250
5.1 Historiography: The Historicization of the World	251
5.2 Philology: A Completed Discipline?	272
5.3 Linguistics and Logic: The Laws of Language and Meaning	281
5.4 Musicology: The Systematic Versus the Historical	301
5.5 Art History and Archaeology: Towards a Visual Philology	311
5.6 Literary and Theatre Studies: The Curious Disappearance of Rhetoric and Poetics	326
5.7 The Study of All Media and Culture: From Film Studies to New Media	339
Conclusion: Is there a Break in the Modern Humanities?	346
6. Conclusions: Insights from the Humanities that Changed the World	352
Appendix A: A Note about Method	364
Appendix B: The Most Important Chinese Dynasties	366
Index	367