Migration Law and the Externalization of Border Controls
European State Responsibility

Anna Liguori
Contents

Preface vii
List of abbreviations viii

Introduction 1

PART I
A case study: the 2017 Italy-Libya Memorandum of Understanding 7

1 The Italy-Libya Memorandum of Understanding of 2 February 2017 9

2 Violations of human rights in Libya 14

3 Italy’s responsibility for complicity 18
   3.1 Article 16 of the International Law Commission Draft Articles on the Responsibility of States (ASR) 20
   3.1.1 The mental element 22
   3.1.2 The requirement of opposability 24
   3.2 Italy’s responsibility for complicity 25

4 Italy’s responsibility for violation of positive obligations inherent in Article 3 ECHR 28
   4.1 Overlap between complicity and positive obligations 29
   4.2 Italy’s responsibility for violation of positive obligations 32
4.2.1 Jurisdiction under ECHR 35
4.2.2 ECHR case law on positive obligations and jurisdiction 38

5 Closing remarks 43

PART II
The 2017 Italy-Libya Memorandum of Understanding as a small part of a broader scenario 49

1 The Externalization of EU migration policies 51
   1.1 The external dimension of EU migration and asylum policy in the GAMM and in the Agenda on Migration 52
   1.2 The EU-Turkey statement of 18 March 2016 55
      1.2.1 Criticism concerning human rights and refugee law 57
      1.2.2 Criticism concerning European Constitutional law 64
   1.3 From the European Commission communication of 7 June 2016 establishing a new Partnership Framework with third countries to the European Council conclusions of 28 June and 18 October 2018 66

2 The attitude of the Luxembourg Court vis-à-vis externalization 75
   2.1 The case law concerning the EU-Turkey Statement 75
   2.2 The humanitarian visa judgment of 7 March 2017 80

3 Closing remarks 88

Conclusions 91

Bibliography 95
Index 117