Re-Thinking the Political Economy of Punishment

Perspectives on Post-Fordism and Penal Politics

ALESSANDRO DE GIORGI
University of Bologna, Italy

ASHGATE

Contents

Acknowledgements vii
Introduction ix

1 The Political Economy of Penality and the Sociology of Punishment – Past and Present 1
Introduction 1
Penality and the Critique of Political Economy 3
Georg Rusche and Otto Kirchheimer: Punishment and Social Structure and the Foundation of the Political Economy of Punishment 6
The Political Economy of Punishment and the New Histories of Punishment 9
A Just Measure of Pain 10
Discipline and Punish 12
The Prison and the Factory 15
Political Economies of Contemporary Penality 19
Incarceration and Unemployment: The United States 19
Incarceration and Unemployment: Other Contexts 25
Variations on a Theme 28
A Return to Rusche and Kirchheimer? 33
Beyond the Political Economy of Punishment? 39

2 Post-Fordism and the Emergence of the Multitude 41
Post-Fordism: A Regime of Surplus 41
Social Surplus: 'The New Excluded' 47
Productive Surplus: 'The Immaterial Labour Force' 54
The Post-Fordist Labour Force as a Multitude 60

3 The Government of Surplus – Preliminary Incursions in the Field of Post-Fordist Social Control 67
From the 'Discipline of Scarcity' to the 'Government of Surplus' 67
Control as 'Non-Knowledge' 74
The Panopticon and Beyond: Signs of a Post-Disciplinary Order 77
The Punitive Metropolis 81
Bridling the Net 86

4 Mass Confinement and Actuarial Penology 91
Mass Imprisonment: From the Welfare State to the Penal State? 91
Incarcerating Risk: The Actuarial Prison 103

5 The Criminalisation of International Migrations: Towards an Actuarial Model of Control? 111
Introduction: Migrations in a Global Economy 111
European Immigration Control: Towards a 'Penal State'? 117
Immigration as an 'Ontological Crime' 124
The War on Immigrants across Europe and the United States 126
Detention and Expulsion as Actuarial Technologies 129

Conclusion 139
Bibliography 145
Index 163