

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS AND PRIVATE LAW IN THE EUROPEAN UNION

I. A Comparative Overview

Edited by

GERT BRÜGGEMEIER

AURELIA COLOMBI CIACCHI

GIOVANNI COMANDÉ

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Table of abbreviations	page viii
Preface	xvii
Introduction	1
§ 1 Research topic: the ‘horizontal effect’ of fundamental rights	1
§ 2 Project history, scope and methodology	2
§ 3 Structure and content of the national reports	5
1. The horizontal effect of fundamental rights and freedoms in European Union Law	8
Part 1 Introduction	8
Part 2 The ECJ case law	11
Part 3 Horizontal effect doctrines in EU law	18
Part 4 Conclusions	36
National Reports¹	117
2. England	119
3. France	190
4. Germany	253
5. Italy	325
6. The Netherlands	405
7. Poland	485
8. Portugal	547

¹ The national reports contained in this volume all follow the same unitary structure, based on a questionnaire format. It should be noted, however, that some of the reports added their own individual sub-headings. Furthermore, some reports chose to omit particular headings from the basic outline provided when these proved superfluous or irrelevant in the context of the specific report.

9.	Spain	610
10.	Sweden	658
	Contents of reports
	Part 1 Fundamental rights	658
	§ 1 Definitions of fundamental rights	658
	§ 2 Sources of fundamental rights	661
	A. National law	661
	B. International and supranational law	663
	Part 2 Fundamental rights, private law and legal theory	667
	§ 1 Terminology	667
	§ 2 Direct and indirect horizontal effect	668
	§ 3 Different horizontal effect for different fundamental rights?	669
	§ 4 Legitimacy	671
	Part 3 Fundamental rights adjudication in private law	672
	§ 1 Judicial review in constitutional matters	672
	§ 2 Private law cases referring to fundamental rights	677
	A. First cases	677
	I. Contract	677
	II. Tort	678
	III. Property	679
	IV. Family	680
	B. Overview of private law cases adjudicated by reference to fundamental rights	680
	I. Contract	680
	II. Tort	681
	III. Property	682
	IV. Family	682
	C. Turning points in case law	683
	I. Contract	683
	II. Tort	685
	III. Property	685
	IV. Family	686
	D. Influence of international and supranational law	686
	E. Influence of foreign law	688
	F. Redundant, formal-only references	688
	§ 3 Remedies and techniques	689
	A. Overview	689
	B. Contract or tort?	690
	C. Special contracts	691
	I. Consumer contracts	691
	II. Employment contracts	692
	D. Balancing	693
	Part 4 Conclusions	694

11. Comparative remarks	698
Introduction: some methodological premises	698
Part 1 Fundamental rights	701
§ 1 In search of a definition of fundamental rights, liberties and principles	701
§ 2 Sources of fundamental rights	707
A. National law and the constitutional settings	707
B. International and supranational law as sources of fundamental rights	710
C. The European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR): incorporation and standing	712
Part 2 Fundamental rights, private law and legal theory	716
§ 1 Terminology	716
§ 2 Direct and indirect horizontal effect in judicial and scholarly opinion	720
§ 3 Different horizontal effect for different fundamental rights?	722
§ 4 Legitimacy	723
Part 3 Fundamental rights adjudication in private law	725
§ 1 Judicial review in constitutional matters	725
§ 2 Private law cases referring to fundamental rights	728
A. First cases	728
I. Contract	729
II. Tort	731
III. Property	734
IV. Family	735
B. Overview of horizontal effect cases	737
C. Turning points in case law	738
D. Influence of international and supranational law	739
E. National applications of the ECHR in private law cases and their role in driving innovation	741
F. Influence of foreign law	743
G. Redundant, formal-only references	744
§ 3 Remedies and techniques	745
A. Overview	745
B. The role of contract or tort	748
C. Searching for a 'constitutionalisation' process of special areas of law	749
D. Balancing	751
Part 4 Some tentative conclusions on fundamental rights and European private law	754
Index	759	