Cinesonidos

Film Music and National Identity During Mexico’s Época de oro

JACQUELINE AVILA

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Contents

_Acknowledgments_

Introduction: Listening to the Época de Oro

1. The Prostitute and the Cinematic Cabaret: Musicalizing the “Fallen Woman” and Mexico City’s Nightlife

2. The Salon, the Stage, and Porfirian Nostalgia

3. The Sounds of Indigenismo: Cultural Integration and Musical Exoticism in _Janitzio_ (1935) and _María Candelaria_ (1944)

4. The Singing Charro in the Comedia Ranchera: Music, Machismo, and the Invention of a Tradition

5. The Strains of the Revolution: Musicalizing the Soldadera in the Revolutionary Melodrama

_Epilogue: After the Época de Oro_

_Bibliography_

_Index_