Making China Policy

Lessons from the Bush and Clinton Administrations

Edited by Ramon H. Myers, Michel C. Oksenberg, and David Shambaugh
Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: The Legacy of U.S. China Policy, 1989–2000 1
  Ramon H. Myers and David Shambaugh

Part I: China Policy Making in the Executive Branch

1 The Bush Administration: The Origins of Engagement 21
  Robert S. Ross

2 The Clinton Years: The Problem of Coherence 45
  Nancy Bernkopf Tucker

Part II: The Role of the U.S. Congress in China Policy Making

3 The U.S. Congress: Personal, Partisan, Political 79
  Robert G. Sutter

4 Interest Groups: Growing Influence 113
  Kerry Dumbaugh

Appendix 4A NGOs Involved in Aspects of U.S. Policy toward China 149

Appendix 4B Pertinent NGO Data 173
Part III: The Taiwan Factor

5 Taiwan Policy Making since Tiananmen: Navigating through Shifting Waters
Richard C. Bush

6 Congress and Taiwan: Understanding the Bond
James Mann

Part IV: External Influences on U.S. China Policy

7 The European Union: A Separate Voice
Michael Yahuda

8 The Asia-Pacific Nations: Searching for Leverage
Seiichirō Takagi

9 A Chinese Account: The Interaction of Policies
Wang Jisi and Wang Yong

Index

About the Contributors