

SUB Hamburg

A/658934

Anarchism and Workers' Self-Management in Revolutionary Spain

FRANK MINTZ

Translated by Paul Sharkey

Contents

Prologue, by Chris Ealham	1
Introduction
Self-Management and Anarcho-Syndicalism	9
Chapter One
Introducing the Anarcho-Syndicalist Movement, the CNT	19
Chapter Two
Catalonia as a Model: Self-Management Arrives in Barcelona; the First Contradictions	63
Chapter Three
A Brief Survey of Self-Management in Other Regions of Spain	79
Chapter Four
Organising Self-Management across the Nation	101
Chapter Five
Self-Management under Attack	131
Chapter Six
Self-Management's Outcomes: Overall Conclusions and Estimates	137
Chapter Seven
Conclusions about Self-Management in 1936–1939, and Broad Reflections	141
Appendices
Introduction to Appendices	155
I: Notes on the Spanish People's Superficial Catholicism	157
II: Revolutionary Uprisings in Spain, 1932–1934	162
III: One Example of Monetary Reform and Scheme for Currency Circulation in a Social Economy	174

IV: The CNT and the FAI: Pressure Groups.....	179
V: The Two Libertarian Communisms, or The Libertarian Party versus Anarcho-Syndicalism.....	191
VI: Notes on Governmental Collaboration.....	209
VII: Making Sense of the Plenum of Confederal Militias and Columns.....	215
VIII: Evidence about the Collectives of Ascó, and Flix (Tarragona) and the Barcelona Barbers' Collective.....	235
IX: The Madrid Peasants' Collective.....	247
X: The Adra Fishermen's Collective	249
XI: The Artesa de Lérida Collective	252
XII: The Barbastro Comarcal Federation of Collectives.....	262
XIII: UGT CNT CLUEA. Citrus Fruit Exports from Revolutionary Spain, 1936–1937	273
XIV: The Establishment, Growth and Operation of the Barcelona and District Locksmiths' and Corrugated Shutters Collective	279
XV: Marx, Engels, the CP, Councilism, Historians and Revolutionary Spain	286
XVI: Francoism, Transition to Democracy and Thoughts on Collective Management.....	305
Glossary of Terms and Initials Used in the Text	313
Index.....	317