

Open Prison Architecture

Design Criteria for a New Prison Typology

Luigi Vessella

University of Florence, Italy

Translation by

Luis Gatt

WITPRESS Southampton, Boston

Contents

Foreword.....vii

Chapter 1: The space of detention..... 1

1.1 The space of detention throughout history	1
1.2 Prison and the reforms of 1700	7
1.3 Prisons in the United States after Independence.....	13
1.4 Twentieth-century penitentiary typologies.....	17
1.5 Some European experiences.....	27
1.6 The Italian penitentiary system	33

Chapter 2: Typo-morphological analysis of the most widespread prison typologies..... 41

2.1 The courtyard building	41
2.2 Radial layout building	47
2.3 Telephone-Pole style building	54
2.4 The detached structures model.....	57
2.5 The compact building.....	67
2.6 The modern Telephone-Pole building	72
2.7 Three examples of penitentiary architecture in Italy	77

Chapter 3: The new model of minimum security prison: international case studies 99

3.1 Minimum security prisons: the origins of the new model in Italy.....	99
3.2 The example of Bollate	103

Chapter 4: International Case Studies.....	105
4.1 Foreword.....	105
4.2 Halden Prison, Norway	108
4.3 The new Justizzentrum in Leoben, Austria.....	117
4.4 The new prison in East Jutland, Denmark	126
4.5 The new Grand Valley Institution for Women, Canada.....	129
4.6 Detention Centre for Mothers, Justizvollzugsanstalt III, Germany	140
4.7 Vordernberg Detention Centre, Austria	147
4.8 Bastøy Prison, Norway	155
4.9 Fenbrook, Medium Security Institution	163
4.10 Healing lodge, Pê Sâkâstêw Centre, minimum-security facility	171
4.11 West Valley Juvenile Hall, Rancho Cucamonga, California	174
Chapter 5: Designing open prisons	177
5.1 Detention in contemporary society	177
5.2 A new subject/a new structure.....	180
Chapter 6: General design criteria	185
6.1 General approach.....	185
6.2 Location.....	187
6.3 Typology	196
6.4 Functional areas and spatial organisation.....	204
6.5 Organisation into residential nuclei	215
6.6 Users and functions	222
Bibliography	239
References	245