

Risk on the Table

Food Production, Health, and the Environment

Edited by

Angela N. H. Creager and Jean-Paul Gaudillière

berghahn

NEW YORK • OXFORD

www.berghahnbooks.com

Contents

List of Figures and Tables	vii
Acknowledgments	ix
List of Abbreviations	x
Introduction Angela N. H. Creager and Jean-Paul Gaudillière	1
PART I. OBJECTIFYING DANGERS
Chapter 1. Salad Days: The Science and Medicine of Bad Greens, 1870–2000 Anne Hardy	29
Chapter 2. Radioactive Diet: Food, Metabolism, and the Environment, ca. 1960 Soraya de Chadarevian	55
Chapter 3. Poison and Cancer: The Politics of Food Carcinogens in 1950s West Germany Heiko Stoff	79
Chapter 4. “EAT. DIE.” The Domestication of Carcinogens in the 1980s Angela N. H. Creager	105
Chapter 5. Risk on the Negotiating Table: Malnutrition, Mold Toxicity, and Postcolonial Development Lucas M. Mueller	138

Chapter 6. Contaminated Foods, Global Environmental Health, and the Political Recalcitrance of a Pollution Problem: PCBs from 1966 to the Present Day Aurélien Féron	163
PART II. ORDERING RISKS
Chapter 7. Trace Amounts at Industrial Scale: Arsenicals and Medicated Feed in the Production of the “Western Diet” Hannah Landecker	187
Chapter 8. Between Bacteriology and Toxicology: Agricultural Antibiotics and US Risk Regulation (1948–77) Claas Kirchhelle	214
Chapter 9. Conflicts of Interest, Ignorance, Capture, and Hegemony in the Diethylstilbestrol US Food Crisis Jean-Paul Gaudillière	243
Chapter 10. Defining Food Additives: Origins and Shortfalls of the US Regulatory Framework Maricel V. Maffini and Sarah Vogel	274
Chapter 11. The Rise (and Fall) of the Food-Drug Line: Classification, Gatekeepers, and Spatial Mediation in Regulating US Food and Health Markets Xaq Frohlich	297
Afterword Deborah Fitzgerald	330
Index	338