Reconsidering Extinction in Terms of the History of Global Bioethics

Edited by Stan Booth and Chris Mounsey
Contents

List of Tables vii
Acknowledgments viii

Introduction: Is Extinction a Thing of the Past?
STAN BOOTH 1

PART I
Delineating Contexts—Extinction 9

1 “Enough to Change a Planet”: Feeling Extinction in Contemporary Literature 11
HEATHER J. HICKS

2 This Selfish Ape 37
NICHOLAS P. MONEY

3 The Extinction of Intellectual Disability: An Enlightenment Project from Locke to Freud 50
SIMON JARRETT

4 “Civilizing the ‘Redman’...”: John Locke, Adam Smith,
and Social Darwinist Perceptions of Religion, Land-Use, and Progress as Policy to Make Extinct the Traditional Lifeways of North American Indian Peoples 68
CHRISTINA WELCH
vi Contents

PART II
Applying Contexts—Extinction Does Not Lead to an “End” 95

5 “Strong in Zeal but Impotent in Head”: British Responses to the Cattle Plagues of the Eighteenth Century 97
CHRIS MOUNSEY

6 “They Are All Dead, Except a Few”: Social Complications and Royal Reactions to Death in England, 1348–1350 112
WENDY J. TURNER

7 The Right to a Cure: The Bioethics of Variolation 136
STAN BOOTH

PART III
Creating “New” Contexts—Evolution 155

8 Tinkering with Eden: The Lure and Myth of Free-Willed Nature 157
IAN D. ROTHERHAM

9 Whose Utopia?: The Complexity of Incorporating Diverse Ethical Views Within Nature Governance Frameworks 184
JOANNA MILLER SMALLWOOD

10 For An Actional Ethics: Making Better Sense of Science 205
STEPHEN J. COWLEY

11 The Descent of Language: Biology, Linguistic Evolution, and Language Extinction 222
ERIC LACEY

Contributors 238
Index 242