Nature’s Entrepôt

Philadelphia’s Urban Sphere
and Its Environmental Thresholds

Edited by Brian C. Black and Michael J. Chiarappa

University of Pittsburgh Press
Contents

Introduction
Brian C. Black

PART I. Ideal and Reality in the Early City

1. William Penn's Philadelphia: The Land and the Plan
   Craig Zabel

   Elizabeth Milroy

3. The Rise and Fall of Yellow Fever in Philadelphia, 1793–1805
   Thomas Apel

PART II. Locating Patterns of Industry and Commerce in the Expanding City

4. Bone Boilers: Nineteenth-Century Green Businessmen?
   Donna J. Rilling
   Michal McMahon

6. Industrial Suburbs: Environmental Liabilities or Assets?
   Carolyn T. Adams

PART III. Landscape Transformation in the Growing City

7. The Grid versus Nature: The History and Legacy of Topographical Change in Philadelphia
   Adam Levine

8. Fed by the Adjoining Waters: The Delaware Estuary’s Marine Resources and the Shaping of Philadelphia’s Metropolitan Orbit
   Michael J. Chiarappa

9. Metropolitan Philadelphia: Sprawl, Shrinkage, and Sustainability
   Robert J. Mason

PART IV. Confronting the Ecologies of the Modern City

10. Restoring Mill Creek: Landscape, Literacy, Environmental History, and City Planning and Design
    Anne Whiston Spirn

    Diane Sicotte

12. Planning the Food-Secure City: Philadelphia’s Agriculture, Retrospect and Prospect
    Domenic Vitiello

    Ann Norton Greene

Notes
Contributors
Index