PEOPLING THE LAST NEW WORLDS: THE FIRST COLONISATION OF SAHUL AND THE AMERICAS

Guest Editor

Dr. Iain Davidson
Emeritus Professor of Archaeology,
University of New England, Armidale,
NSW, Australia
Email address: iain.davidson@live.com.au
PEOPLING THE LAST NEW WORLDS: THE FIRST COLONISATION OF SAHUL AND THE AMERICAS

Peopling the last new worlds: The first colonisation of Sahul and the Americas
I. Davidson

Following Pleistocene road signs of human dispersals across Eurasia
O. Bar-Yosef and A. Belfer-Cohen

Genetic evidence for the colonization of Australia
S. van Holst Pellekaan

Late Pleistocene colonization of North America from Northeast Asia: New insights from large-scale paleogeographic reconstructions
E.J. Dixon

Of boats and string: The maritime colonisation of Australia
J. Balme

Looking for the archaeological signature in Australian Megafaunal extinctions
J. Field, S. Wroe, C.N. Trueman, J. Garvey and S. Wyatt-Spratt

Extinctions in North America’s Late Glacial landscapes
G. Haynes

Iconic imagery: Pleistocene rock art development across northern Australia
K. Mulvaney

Early Paleoindian big-game hunting in North America: Provisioning or Politics?
J.D. Speth, K. Newlander, A.A. White, A.K. Lemke and L.E. Anderson

Simple stone flaking in Australasia: Patterns and implications
M.W. Moore

Human colonization and late pleistocene lithic industries of the Americas
M.J. Shott

A continent of Nations: The emergence of new regionally distinct rock art styles across Australia
J. Ross

On the extremes of hunter-fisher-gatherers of America’s Pacific Rim
J. Estévez and A. Vila

‘Complexity’ and the Australian continental narrative: Themes in the archaeology of Holocene Australia
S. Ulm

People colonizing New Worlds: Abstracts of Symposium papers