Contents

Acknowledgements xi
List of Illustrations xiv
Abbreviations and Terminology xvi

1 Entering Canton and Macao
1 Asian Power and European Compliance 4
2 The Daily Making of a Home 7
3 The Practices of Daily Life 11
4 Tactics In the Face of a Conditional Everyday Life 14
5 What Is Missing Is the Commonplace Abroad 15
6 The Remains of the Days 19

2 The Who's Who of Canton and Macao 24
1 The Foreign Trade Groups 25
1.1 Non-Chinese Traders and Masculinities 25
1.2 The Foreign Women 36
1.3 Sailors and Slaves 38
2 The People of Macao 41
3 The Local Trade Groups 46
3.1 The Merchants, the Officials – and 'the Mandarins' 46
3.2 The Labourers of the Pearl River Delta 54
3.3 The Prostitutes 59
4 The 'Chinese' 62
4.1 'The Chinese Men' 63
4.2 "The Chinese Women' 68
5 Conclusion 72

Colin Campbell and the 1730s 75

3 A Space for Intersections 82
1 The City Space 83
1.1 Walking around the City 90
1.2 City of Women 92
2 The Factory Space 98
2.1 Inside the Factories 105
2.2 The Dining Space 108
3 Macao 111
4 The Harbour Space 114
CONTENTS

Michael Grubb and the 1750s and 1760s 130

4 The Communication Struggle 137
1 Separate Groups, Separate Languages? 139
  1.1 Circumventing the Rules 141
  1.2 Pidgin English 149
2 Local and Global Communication Channels 155
  2.1 The Role of the Interpreters 156
  2.2 Letters from Near and Far 159
  2.3 Channels for Circulation of Knowledge 164
3 Conclusion 172

Olof Lindahl and the 1770s and 1780s 175

5 Spending Time and Spending Money 182
1 Domestic Consumption 183
2 Food as Cultural Evaluation and Adaptation 188
3 Drinking Right and Drinking Wrong 192
4 Sharing a Cup of Tea and a Smoke 197
5 What You Get from Giving Away 200
6 Boredom and What to do about It 204
7 Going Outside 210
8 Conclusion 214

Anders Ljungstedt and the Early Nineteenth Century 224

6 Finding and Becoming Trustworthy Men 224
1 Spaces for Trust 225
2 Finding a Language for Trust 229
  2.1 Gossip and Secrets 230
  2.2 The Myth of Special Friendship 233
3 How to Look Trustworthy 234
4 How to Act Trustworthy 243
  4.1 Finding a Certainty of Response 244
  4.2 Accepting Distrust 249
  4.3 Adapting Masculinities 252
5 Conclusion 260