Contents

Biographical sketches of contributors, xv

Foreword, xxvii
Richard C. Scott

Preface, xxix

Introduction and summary of entrepreneurship research, xxxi
Karl H. Vesper

Section One
The Entrepreneur, 1

chapter i
Entrepreneurial history, 7
Harold C. Livesay

Overview, 7
Historical definitions of entrepreneurship, 8
Theories of entrepreneurship, 11
Current research efforts, 13
Summary and conclusions, 14
Contents

commentary/elaboration

Additional aspects of entrepreneurial history, 15
Albro Martin

Definition of entrepreneurship, 16
Primary requisites for the entrepreneurial climate, 16
The place of entrepreneurship in history, 17
Summary, 18

References, 18

chapter ii

Research about living entrepreneurs, 20
John A. Hornaday

Overview, 20
Sources of research information about living entrepreneurs, 20
Organization of information about living entrepreneurs, 23
Gaps in the research about entrepreneurs, 29

commentary/elaboration

Additional considerations of research about living entrepreneurs, 35
Russell Knight

References, 36

chapter iii

The psychology of the entrepreneur, 39
Robert H. Brockhaus, Sr.

Overview, 39
Psychological characteristics, 40
Effects of previous experiences, 50
Personal characteristics, 53
Conclusions, 55

commentary/elaboration

Elaborations on the psychology of the entrepreneur, 57
Yvon Gasse

Overview, 57
Psychological characteristics, 57
Effects of previous experiences, 62
Personal characteristics, 63
Conclusion, 66

References, 66
chapter iv
The social dimensions of entrepreneurship, 72
Albert Shapero and Lisa Sokol

Overview, 72
A possible frame of reference—a paradigm of entrepreneurial event formation, 76
Examining the central questions in terms of the paradigm, 87

References, 88

chapter v
The sociology of entrepreneurship, 91
Edwin Harwood

Overview, 91
The problem of definition, 92
Risk, profit, and innovation, 93
Updating Schumpeter, 95
Artifactual entrepreneurs, 97
How many Heffalumps? 97

References, 98

Section Two
Entrepreneurial Technology, 99

chapter vi
Nonacademic literature on entrepreneurship: an evaluation, 103
Jacquetta J. McClung and James A. Constantin

Overview, 103
Scope of the search, 103
Methodology, 106
The literature, 118
Divisions of this book and the literature, 119
Conclusions, 122
commentary/elaboration

Commentary on nonacademic literature on entrepreneurship, 124
Joseph Mancuso

References, 125

chapter vii

New venture creation: models and methodologies, 126
Jeffry A. Timmons

Overview, 126
Start-up and entry methodologies, 126
Project ISEED—representative conclusions, 131
Common threads and controversies, 132
Controversies, 133
Future directions for research, 135
Conclusion, 136

commentary/elaboration

Additional thoughts on modeling new venture creation, 136
Herbert Kierulf

References, 138

chapter viii

Risk capital research, 140
William E. Wetzel, Jr.

Overview, 140
Economic development strategy, 140
Entrepreneurship, risk capital, and New England economic policy, 142
Capital gaps and risk capital research, 147
Observations and suggestions, 160

References, 163

chapter ix

Venture capital research, 165
David J. Brophy

Overview, 165
Background, 165
A study of venture capital investment: the financing of new, technology-based firms, 166
Contents

Application of modern finance theory to a venture capital problem, 182
Conclusions and recommendations, 190

References, 192

chapter x

The entrepreneurship–small business interface, 193
Arnold C. Cooper

Overview, 193
Classification of the literature, 193
Discontinuances, survival, and profitability, 194
Cross-sectional studies, 195
Longitudinal studies, 197
Performance, and founding characteristics, 200
Stages of development, 201
Opportunities for research, 205

commentary/elaboration

Commentary on the entrepreneurship–small business interface, 206
Justin G. Longenecker

References, 207

chapter xi

Internal corporate entrepreneurship, 209
Hans Schollhammer

Overview, 209
The concept of entrepreneurship, 210
Internal corporate entrepreneurship strategies, 211
Entrepreneurship and environment, 218
A comparative analysis of internal entrepreneurship strategies, 221
Summary and suggested directions for future research, 222

commentary/elaboration

Commentary on internal corporate entrepreneurship, 224
Edward Shils

References, 226
Section Three
Entrepreneurship and Progress, 231

chapter xii
Entrepreneurship in economic development, 237
Calvin A. Kent

Overview, 237
The theory of economics, 237
Supply side considerations, 239
Demand side considerations, 243
Stage theories, 247
Government as entrepreneur, 248
Directions for future research, 252

References, 253

chapter xiii
Entrepreneurship in the less developed world, 257
Wayne G. Broehl, Jr.

Overview, 257
An entrepreneurial system model, 257

References, 269

chapter xiv
The theory of entrepreneurship in economic growth, 272
Israel M. Kirzner

Overview, 272
The value of entrepreneurship, 272

References, 276
chapter xv

The role of entrepreneurs in innovation, 277
O. J. Krasner

Overview, 277
Innovation: definition and types, 278
Innovation and institutions, 278
Clues to improving entrepreneurial innovation yield, 280
A plan of action, 281

commentary/elaboration

Elaboration on entrepreneurs and innovation, 282
Gerald Udell

Overview, 282
The difficulty of noncorporate industrial innovation research, 282
The importance of noncorporate industrial innovation, 283
Idea generation stage, 284
Idea evaluation stage, 284
Research and development stages, 285
Commercialization stages, 285
Conclusion, 285

References, 286

chapter xvi

The environment for entrepreneurship, 288
Albert V. Bruno and Tyzoon T. Tyebjee

Overview, 288
Environmental factors in entrepreneurship, 288
Directions for future research, 299
Conclusions, 307

commentary/elaboration

Elaboration on the entrepreneur and his environment, 307
Johannes M. Pennings

Overview, 307

References, 313
Section Four
Entrepreneurship and Academia, 317

chapter xvii

Research on education for entrepreneurship, 321
Karl H. Vesper

Overview, 321
Growth of programs, 321
Review of the literature, 323
Four-year schools, 324
Course evaluation criteria, 327
Teaching objectives in the basic course, 327
Independent variables and experimentation, 330
Venture design projects, 335
Series of courses, 337
Programs in entrepreneurship at four-year schools, 339
Courses in two-year schools, 341
Courses in high schools, 341
Nonacademic educational programs, 341
Other programs, 342
Future potential, 342

commentary/elaboration

Elaboration on education in entrepreneurship, 344
Kenneth E. Loucks

commentary/elaboration

Commentary on entrepreneurship education, 346
Wayne S. Brown

Overview, 346
Importance of technical innovation, 346
Role of universities, 347
Case study of the Utah Innovation Center, 347

References, 350
chapter xviii

Entrepreneurship research: methods and directions, 352
William L. Paulin, Robert E. Coffey, and Mark E. Spaulding

Overview, 352
Objectives, 352
Survey of research methods: a five-dimensional classification, 353
Streams of entrepreneur research: four topic areas, 362
Future directions for entrepreneurship research: some suggestions and speculations, 366
Appendix A: Studies reviewed, 368
Appendix B: Journals that have published articles concerning entrepreneurship, 373

commentary/elaboration

Commentary on research in the field of entrepreneurship,. 374
Rein Peterson and Deszö Horváth

Overview, 374

Commentary on research methodology in entrepreneurship, 377
M. Ray Perryman

Overview, 377
The state of entrepreneurial research, 377
The future of entrepreneurial research, 378
References, 378

Section Five
Areas for Future Research, 381

chapter xix

Research needs and issues in entrepreneurship, 383
Donald L. Sexton

Overview, 383
Research on the entrepreneur, 384
Contents

Research in entrepreneurial technology, 386
Research needs: entrepreneurship and progress, 387
Research in the area of entrepreneurship and academia, 388
In closing, 389

Bibliography, 390

Index, 418