

World Trade Systems of the East and West

Nagasaki and the Asian Bullion Trade Networks

By

Geoffrey C. Gunn

BRILL

LEIDEN | BOSTON

Contents

Preface IX

List of Tables and Illustrations XII

Glossary/Abbreviations XIV

Note on Weights and Currencies XVIII

Introduction 1

Japanese Historiography 4

The East-Southeast Asian Bullion Trade Zone 10

The Book 17

1 Kyushu in the East Asian Trade Networks 19

Spanish Manila and the Galleon Trade 19

The Portuguese "Discovery" of the Kyushu Trade Networks 21

The Ryukyu Tribute Trade 28

Gold, Silver, and Copper Mines in Japan 32

Japanese Maritime Trade with China and Korea 37

The Portuguese Missionary Arrival in Kyushu 42

Conclusion 45

2 Merchants and Missionaries in the Foundation of Nagasaki 47

Nagasaki's Obscure Origins 47

The Portuguese Merchant-Missionary Arrival in Nagasaki 49

Nagasaki under Jesuit Rule 53

The Manila-Japan Trade Connection 58

Return to Imperial Rule (1588) and Persecutions 62

Conclusion 71

3 Nagasaki and the Silk Trade 73

Setting the Scene on Silk Production and Procurement 73

Functional Aspects of the Macau-Nagasaki Silk Trade 78

The Portuguese Merchant Presence 87

The VOC Silk Trade with Tonkin 91

Conclusion 97

4 The Dutch and English at Hirado 99

The Dutch Establishment at Hirado (1609-41) 99

The Dutch and the Contest for Taiwan (1604-61) 103

	The Zheng Family Dynasty	107
	The Dutch Trade at Hirado	108
	The English at Hirado (1613-23)	112
	Conclusion	120
5	The Shimabara Rebellion (1637-38) Revisited	122
	Background to the Rebellion	123
	The Duarte Correa Manuscript and the First Stirrings of Rebellion	125
	The Battle for Shimabara	129
	Millennial Rebels or Economic Victims?	135
	The Anti-Christian Backlash	138
	Conclusion	141
6	Nagasaki and the Southeast Asia Trade	143
	Drawing the Contours of the "Red Seal" Trade	144
	The Chinese Junk Trade at Nagasaki in the kai-hentai Records	149
	Status of the Junk Traffic in 1664	157
	Scale and Scope of the Nagasaki-Vietnam Trade	161
	Conclusion	166
7	The Chinese of Nagasaki and their Social and Commercial Activities	168
	Origins of the Nagasaki Chinese Community under the Ming	168
	Chinese Temple Communities in Nagasaki and their Functional Role	174
	The Zheng Trade with Nagasaki during the Ming-Qing Transition	178
	The Restoration of the China Trade under the Qing	184
	The Seventeenth Century Chinese Legacy in Nagasaki	189
	Conclusion	192
8	Nagasaki in the Age of Kaempfer	194
	Kaempfer's Nagasaki	195
	Dutch Trade at Deshima	202
	A Dutch West India Company Account of 1721-23	208
	Carl Peter Thunberg's Account of 1795	211
	Closed Door under Foreign Pressure	216
	Conclusion	218

9 Parameters of the Bullion Trade Economy Network	221
Portuguese Profits on the Silk-for-Silver Trade	222
Putting a Value on the Dutch and Chinese Bullion Trade	223
Portuguese and Dutch in the Global Copper Trade	229
Reassessing the Silver Drain from Japan, the Role of Arai Hakuseki	236
Nagasaki and the Asian Bullion Trade Reprised	240
 Conclusion	 244
Global Economy and World System	244
Stagnant Japan, Rising Japan, or Mid-Tokugawa Crisis?	248
A Precocious Early Modernization?	254
Nagasaki's Pioneer Role in Japan's Industrialization	256
 Bibliography	 259
Index	285