The Effects of International Peace Missions on Corruption

How Multinational Peace Missions Enable and Constrain Good Governance in Post-Conflict Societies

Nomos
Table of Contents

Abstract 11

1. The Vicious Cycle of Conflict and Bad Governance 23

1.1 Why investigate the effects of international peace missions on corruption? 25

1.2 Research question and outline 30

1.3 Small is beautiful: A preview of the research findings 32

2. Corruption, Conflict and Intervention Reviewed 37

2.1 Corruption: paradigms, causes and treatment 37

2.1.1 First generation: two paradigms of corruption 38

2.1.2 Second generation: the evolution of data and correlates of corruption 44

2.1.3 Third generation: critique, causality and consolidation 47

2.2 Corruption after conflict and the role of external actors 50

2.3 Peacekeeping and peacebuilding: external governance in post-conflict environments 53

2.3.1 The effects of international peace missions: the view from above 54

2.3.2 The effects of international peace missions: the view from below 56

2.3.3 Emerging approaches to studying the effects of international peace missions 58

2.4 Summary of research gaps 60

3.1 Conceptualizing corruption 62

3.1.1 Defining corruption 62

3.1.2 Towards an equilibrium approach to corruption: statehood, institutions and uncertainty 63

3.1.3 Concept specification 70
3.2 Conceptualizing mission intrusiveness 74
   3.2.1 Defining international peace missions 74
   3.2.2 Authority and resources 75
   3.2.3 Concept specification 76
3.3 Modeling the causal relationship 77
   3.3.1 Governance 77
   3.3.2 The institutional analysis of international peace missions 81
   3.3.3 Compliance 86
3.4 Research hypotheses 88
3.5 Summary 93

4. Bridging The Gap: Research Methodology 96
4.1 Defining the units of analysis and specifying the universe of cases 96
4.2 Operationalizing the research variables 98
   4.2.1 Dependent variable: CORRUPTION 98
   4.2.2 Independent variable: MISSION INTRUSIVENESS 103
4.3 Statistical methods for sample analysis 108
4.4 Case study research and case selection 112
4.5 Qualitative analysis and process-tracing 116
4.6 Summary 123

5. How International Peace Missions Enable and Constrain Corruption 125
5.1 Statistical sample analysis 126
   5.1.1 Descriptive statistics 126
   5.1.2 Testing differences 134
   5.1.3 Goodness of fit of explanatory models and MISSION INTRUSIVENESS 136
   5.1.4 Case selection 146
5.2 Case study of Sierra Leone 151
   5.2.1 Case and conflict profile 151
   5.2.2 Mission intrusiveness 158
      5.2.2.1 ECOMOG: Mission profile 159
      5.2.2.2 UNOMSIL: Mission profile 160
      5.2.2.3 UNAMSIL: Mandate, resources and deployment 162
Table of Contents

5.2.2.4 UNAMSIL governance in the national governance arena | 165
5.2.2.5 UNAMSIL governance in the security sector | 167
5.2.2.6 UNAMSIL governance in the extractive industries | 168
5.2.2.7 UNIOSIL and UNIPSIL Mission profiles | 169

5.2.3 Processes and effects | 172
5.2.3.1 Governance actors | 172
5.2.3.2 Structural effects on the political and economic systems | 176
5.2.3.3 Governance recipients and patterns of compliance | 180

5.2.4 Corruption in Sierra Leone | 184
5.2.4.1 Corruption by indicators | 184
5.2.4.2 Opportunities and modes of corruption | 186
5.2.4.3 Constraints and anticorruption governance | 190

5.3 Case study of Côte D'Ivoire | 194
5.3.1 Case and conflict profile | 194
5.3.2 Mission intrusiveness | 200
5.3.2.1 ECOMICI: Mission profile | 200
5.3.2.2 MINUCI: Mission profile | 202
5.3.2.3 UNOCI: Mandate, resources and deployment | 203
5.3.2.4 UNOCI governance in the national governance arena | 206
5.3.2.5 UNOCI governance in the security sector | 207
5.3.2.6 UNOCI governance in the extractive industries | 209

5.3.3 Processes and effects | 210
5.3.3.1 Governance actors | 210
5.3.3.2 Structural effects on the political and economic systems | 214
5.3.3.3 Governance recipients and patterns of compliance | 216

5.3.4 Corruption in Côte D'Ivoire | 220
5.3.4.1 Corruption by indicators | 220
5.3.4.2 Opportunities and modes of corruption | 222
5.3.4.3 Constraints and anticorruption governance | 226

5.4 Case study of Kosovo | 229
5.4.1 Case and conflict profile | 229
5.4.2 Mission intrusiveness | 233
5.4.2.1 UNMIK: Mandate, resources and deployment | 234
5.4.2.2 UNMIK governance in the national governance arena | 238

15
5.4.2.3 UNMIK governance in the security sector 241
5.4.2.4 EULEX: Mandate, resources and deployment 242
5.4.2.5 EULEX governance in the national governance arena 245
5.4.2.6 EULEX governance in the security sector 246
5.4.3 Processes and effects 247
5.4.3.1 Governance actors 247
5.4.3.2 Structural effects on the political and economic systems 250
5.4.3.3 Governance recipients and patterns of compliance 252
5.4.4 Corruption in Kosovo 256
5.4.4.1 Corruption by indicators 256
5.4.4.2 Opportunities and modes of corruption 259
5.4.4.3 Constraints and anticorruption governance 262
5.5 Case study of Croatia 265
5.5.1 Case and conflict profile 265
5.5.2 Mission intrusiveness 271
5.5.2.1 UNPROFOR: Mission profile 273
5.5.2.2 UNCRO: Mission profile 275
5.5.2.3 UNTAES: Mandate, resources and deployment 276
5.5.2.4 UNTAES governance in the national governance arena 278
5.5.2.5 UNTAES governance in the security sector 282
5.5.2.6 UNPSG: Mission profile 284
5.5.2.7 OSCE Mission to Croatia: Mission profile 284
5.5.2.8 UNMOP: Mission profile 284
5.5.3 Processes and effects 285
5.5.3.1 Governance actors 285
5.5.3.2 Structural effects on the political and economic systems 287
5.5.3.3 Governance recipients and patterns of compliance 288
5.5.4 Corruption in Croatia 294
5.5.4.1 Corruption by indicators 294
5.5.4.2 Opportunities and modes of corruption 296
5.5.4.3 Constraints and anticorruption governance 299
5.6 Why more is not better: Research findings 303
5.6.1 Review of the statistical analysis 303
5.6.2 Review of the case studies 306
5.6.2.1 Sierra Leone 306
Table of Contents

5.6.2.2 Côte D'Ivoire 308
5.6.2.3 Kosovo 310
5.6.2.4 Croatia 313

5.6.3 Review of the research hypotheses 315

5.6.4 Discussion of the findings and contributions to the literature 320
  5.6.4.1 Case comparison: The effects of mission intrusiveness on corruption 320
  5.6.4.2 Case comparison: The effects of human development on corruption and external governance interventions 324
  5.6.4.3 A building-block theory on corruption in host states of international peace missions 328
  5.6.4.4 Bounded agency: institutional constraints on international peace missions 335
  5.6.4.5 Towards an integrated research agenda 337

6. Summary 339
  6.1 Summary of the research agenda 339
  6.2 Summary of the research framework 340
  6.3 Summary of the research findings 343
  6.4 Theoretical implications 347
  6.5 Remaining questions for future research 352
  6.6 Policy implications 354

Annex A: References 361

Annex B: List of Abbreviations 401

Annex C: List of Abbreviations of State Names 405