RESEARCHING SOUTH–SOUTH DEVELOPMENT COOPERATION

The Politics of Knowledge Production

Edited by Emma Mawdsley, Elsje Fourie and Wiebe Nauta
CONTENTS

List of illustrations viii
List of contributors ix
Acknowledgements xiii
Foreword by Neera Chandhoke xiv

Introduction 1
Elsje Fourie, Wiebe Nauta and Emma Mawdsley

1 The (im)possibility of Southern theory: The opportunities and challenges of cultural brokerage in co-producing knowledge about China–Africa relations 12
Giles Mohan, Ben Lampert, May Tan-Mullins and Richmond Atta-Ankomah

Vignette: Where is the South? Global, postcolonial and intersectional perspectives 27
Ruben Gonzalez-Vicente

2 Devouring international relations: Anthropophagy and the study of South–South cooperation 32
Adriana Erthal Abdenur

Vignette: Has research gone South? Perspectives of a Brazilian researcher in Britain 49
Rubens de S. Duarte
3 Criticizing your 'motherland' to foreigners? The dilemma of critical scholarship and self-censorship in analysing Korea's foreign aid as a national(istic) project
Sung-Mi Kim
Vignette: “We need people like you”: Reflections on identity and expectations in South–South Cooperation research
Cynthia M. Kamwengo
Vignette: Silent North, loud South: Reflections on transregional research in Afrasian and Afrabian spaces
John Njenga Karugia

4 A plea for kaleidoscopic knowledge production
Mayke Kaag and Miriam Ocadiz
Vignette: The politics of knowledge production and post/de/anti-colonial positionality
Han Cheng
Vignette: Difference within similarity: How South–South Cooperation research should no longer label ‘difference’ as an obstacle to partnerships
Natalia Herbst
Vignette: The Africa–China Reporting Project in Johannesburg as South–South journalism nexus
Barry van Wyk

5 Doing research on unstable ground: The ebb and flow of Brazilian South–South cooperation, from Lula to Bolsonaro
Letícia Maria Cesarino
Vignette: Interrogating the binary in Brazil's agricultural cooperation for development
Lídia Cabral
Vignette: Writing about South–South Development Cooperation as a Mexican diplomat
Gerardo Bracho

6 Interrogating the solidarity narrative: Rediscovering difference through African–Asian Gender Politics
Rirhandu Mageza-Barthel and Uta Ruppert
Vignette: The ‘avuncular’ gatekeepers: Interrogating authority, authenticity and autonomy in South–South Cooperation scholarship in India
Supriya Roychoudhury

Vignette: Experiencing gender and positionality as a female professional in the Korean official development assistance (ODA) sector
Jinhee Kim

7 Let’s focus on facilitators: Life-worlds and reciprocity in researching ‘Southern’ development cooperation agencies
Sebastian Haug

Vignette: “When you leave, they will kill me”: Ethnography, ethics and (post)colonial entanglements in SSDC research
Katharine Howell

Vignette: “I’m talking to you because you are Polish”: Reflections on identities and historical memories in researching North–South relations.
Katarzyna Baran

Conclusion: Aiming for meaningful connections in knowledge production on South–South Development Cooperation: Navigating and overcoming inequalities
Wiebe Nauta, Emma Mawdsley and Elsje Fourie

Index