Table of Contents

List of Figures 11

List of Tables 13

List of Abbreviations 15

1. Introduction 19
   1.1 Research Design 23
   1.2 Outline of the Study 26

2. Online Political & Government Communication Research 29
   2.1 Political Communications in an Online Age: Theoretical Perspectives 30
   2.2 Government Communications in an Online Age 35
      2.2.1. E-government & e-democracy research paradigms 36
      2.2.2. Motivations behind online initiatives within local government 39
      2.2.3. Governments & social media 41
   2.3 Comparative Government & Political Communications Studies 44
      2.3.1. Comparative government communications 44
      2.3.2. Comparative online political communications 49
   2.4 Summary 51

3. Background: Political, Media & Government Communication Structures 54
   3.1 Decentralised, Regulated & Formalised: German Institutional Structures 55
   3.2 Centralised & Professionalised: British Institutional Structures 62
   3.3 Summary & Research Guiding Assumptions I 75
Table of Contents

4. Theoretical Analysis: An Organisational & Network Perspective 80

4.1 Political Communications in an Online Age: The Missing Meso Perspective 81

4.1.1. Political organisations and digital technologies 83

4.1.2. Summary: political organisational perspectives 88

4.2 Government Organisations: An Overlooked Organisational Form 90

4.2.1. Government organisations as unique organisational structures 92

4.2.2. Summary: government organisational perspectives 101

4.3 Comparing Political Communications in a Digital Age 103

4.4 Understanding the New Media Environment: A Network Perspective 110

4.5 Summary & Research Guiding Assumptions II 117

5. Methodological Approach 121

5.1 Research Questions 122

5.2 Research Design: A Comparative Study 125

5.3 Conceptual and Methodological Challenges: Establishing Equivalence 126

5.4 Methodological Approach: Online Content Analysis & Social Network Analysis 127

5.5 Definitions & Sampling 129

5.5.1. Defining online government communications 129

5.5.2. Sampling 131

5.6 Saving Content: Technological Considerations 133

5.7 Cultural and Language Considerations in the Codebook 135

5.8 Developing the Categories of Analysis 137

5.9 Reliability & Validity 140

5.10 Social Network Analysis 142

6. Results 145

6.1 Online Content Analysis: Research Questions 146

6.1.1. Structural analysis government websites & social media 147

6.1.2. Interaction on government websites 149

6.1.3. Government organisations on Twitter: interaction 152

6.1.4. Government ministers on Twitter: interaction 157

6.1.5. Government organisations on Facebook: interaction 160
6.1.6. Government ministers on Facebook: interaction 162
6.1.7. Government organisations on YouTube: interaction 162
6.1.8. Government networking online 163
6.1.9. Individualised communications on social media 167
6.1.10. Transparency of government communication online 172
6.1.11. Changing press relations in an online sphere 174

6.2 Interim Summary: Results of the Online Content Analysis 175

6.3 Social Network Analysis: Research Questions 182
   6.3.1. Retweet network Great Britain 184
   6.3.2. Retweet network Germany 186

6.4 Interim Summary: Results of the Social Network Analysis 190

7. Discussion 192
   7.1 Government Organisations and Unidirectional Communications Online 193
   7.2 Organisational Differences in Social Media Use 198
   7.3 Individualisation of Government Communications on Social Media 200
   7.4 Centralised Government Actors in Twitter Networks 205
   7.5 Government Networking on Twitter 207
   7.6 Comparing the Use of Different Social Media Platforms 210
   7.7 Summary 212

8. Conclusion 215

References 225

Appendix 239

Appendix 1. Full Sample of Government Organisations in Great Britain 239
Appendix 2. Full Sample of Government Organisations in Germany 241
Appendix 3. English Language Codebook 242
Appendix 4. Results Formal Reliability Tests DE & GB 273
Appendix 5. Social Network Analysis Codebook 275