Kazuo Kobayashi

Indian Cotton Textiles in West Africa

palgrave macmillan
CONTENTS

1 Introduction 1
Rethinking African Agency in Global History 3
Indian Cotton Textiles in the Pre-industrial World 7
South-South Economic History 12
Sources 13
Organisation of the Book 15
Conclusion 17

2 West African Seaborne Trade, 1750–1850: The Transition from the Transatlantic Slave Trade to ‘Legitimate’ Commerce 29
The Transatlantic Slave Trade and Jihad in West Africa, 1750–1850 31
Exports from West Africa in the Early Nineteenth Century 38
Imports into West Africa 53
Conclusion 68

3 Guinées in the Lower Senegal River: A Consumer-Led Trade in the Early Nineteenth Century 81
What Is a Piece of Guinée? 82
Why Did West African Consumers Prefer Indian Guinées? 83
Commercial Networks in the Lower Senegal River 87
Guinées as a Currency 95
Conclusion 111
4 Procurement of Indian Textiles for West Africa, 1750–1850
Rethinking the Procurement of Indian Textiles 128
English Investment in Textile Production in South India 129
French Investment in Textile Production in Pondicherry 144
Conclusion 153

5 Western European Merchants and West Africa, 1750–1850: Continuity and Change
British Merchants and West Africa 166
French Merchants and West Africa 174
Conclusion 186

6 Conclusion
Economic Development in Nineteenth-Century West Africa 196
Africa, Empire and Global History 199
Multiple Globalisation in the Emergence of the Modern Global Economy 201

Bibliography 211

Index 241