The Impact of China’s Belt and Road Initiative
From Asia to Europe

Jeremy Garlick
Contents

List of figures xi
List of tables xii
Acknowledgements xiii

1 The role of the Belt and Road Initiative in China’s international relations 1

1.1 The complex and multifaceted rise of China 1
1.2 The Belt and Road Initiative: China’s ‘new silk roads’ 7
1.3 Reactions to the BRI as frames of interpretation 13
1.4 Developing a theoretical-methodological approach to the Belt and Road 20
1.5 Organisation and contribution of the book 22
References 25

2 Theorising the Belt and Road Initiative 33

2.1 Introduction: how to theorise the BRI’s complexity? 33
2.2 China’s flexible, syncretic approach to policymaking in a complex world: implications for the BRI 35
2.3 Theory 1: Tang Shiping’s social evolution paradigm (SEP) 40
2.4 Theory 2: neo-Gramscian hegemony 44
2.5 Theory 3: offensive mercantilism 48
2.6 Complex eclecticism: a theoretical-methodological framework for analysing the BRI below the macro-level 51
2.7 Conclusion 55
References 56
3 Complex eclecticism 62

3.1 Introduction: why complex eclecticism? 62
3.2 Sil and Katzenstein’s analytic eclecticism: strengths and weaknesses 63
3.3 International relations (IR) theoretical schools: mainstream, non-mainstream and non-Western 68
3.4 Moving from inter-paradigm debates to conceptual toolkits 72
3.5 Complexity theory/complexity thinking (CT) 76
3.6 Incompleteness and difficulty: an impasse or a way forward for IR theory? 78
3.7 The problem of complex systems in IR 81
3.8 An outline of CT’s conceptual toolkit 84
  3.8.1 Nonlinearity/sensitivity to initial parameters 87
  3.8.2 Feedback loops 87
  3.8.3 Emergence/self-organisation 88
  3.8.4 Tipping points/edge of chaos 89
  3.8.5 Black swans 89
  3.8.6 Path dependence 90
3.9 Conclusion: combining complexity and eclecticism to analyse the BRI 90
References 95

4 Applying complex eclecticism to the Belt and Road Initiative 101

4.1 Introduction 101
4.2 Interdependence, institutions and non-state actors 102
4.3 Power, states and anarchy 109
4.4 Norms, ideas and intersubjectivity 115
4.5 Non-mainstream concepts: harmony of interests/world society/relationalism/patriarchal authoritarianism/economic inequality/natural environment 123
4.6 Complexity theory/complexity thinking (CT) 130
4.7 Conclusion 133
References 134

5 The characteristics of the Belt and Road Initiative 141

5.1 Introduction 141
5.2 The emerging characteristics of the Belt and Road Initiative 141
  5.2.1 The Belt and Road is supposed to encompass over 60 countries in Asia and Europe 143
5.2.2 The Belt and Road is intended to improve connectivity across Eurasia, primarily by focusing on improving transport and energy infrastructure, with the other stated goals probably being subsidiary 146

5.2.3 The Belt and Road contains two main routes, the Silk Road Economic Belt (SREB) and the Maritime Silk Road (MSR) 152

5.2.4 The Belt and Road contains sub-projects 153

5.2.5 The Belt and Road is a continuation of previous official Chinese government policies 155

5.2.6 The BRI is Xi Jinping's flagship foreign policy initiative, and thus closely associated with his leadership 156

5.2.7 The BRI involves the use of institutions such as the Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank (AIIB), the Silk Road Fund and regional forums 157

5.2.8 The Belt and Road is intended to have appeal for foreign audiences as well as the domestic Chinese one, thus boosting China's soft power abroad and legitimacy at home 160

5.2.9 The Belt and Road is ambitious, large-scale, loose, and vague 160

5.2.10 The BRI is intended to achieve win-win cooperation among participating nations 161

5.3 Conclusion: unpacking the implications 162

References 164

6 The Belt and Road Initiative’s regional impacts 170

6.1 Introduction 170

6.2 Central Asia 172

6.2.1 Applying the complex eclecticism toolkits to Central Asia 177

6.3 Central and Eastern Europe (CEE) 178

6.3.1 Applying the complex eclecticism toolkits to CEE 183

6.4 Southeast Asia 184

6.4.1 Applying the complex eclecticism toolkits to Southeast Asia 189

6.5 South Asia 190

6.5.1 Applying the complex eclecticism toolkits to South Asia 197

6.6 The Middle East 198

6.6.1 Applying the complex eclecticism toolkits to the Middle East 202

6.7 Conclusions 203

References 205
Contents

7 Assessing the impacts of China’s Belt and Road Initiative 216

7.1 Introduction 216

7.2 Summary of the findings in Chapters 4–6 216

7.3 Assessing complex eclecticism 218

7.4 Assessing the macro-level theories 221

7.5 The Belt and Road’s global implications 227

7.6 Conclusion: the Belt and Road Initiative into the future 229

References 232

Index 235