

Action Learning and its Applications

Edited by

Robert L. Dilworth

Associate Professor Emeritus, Virginia Commonwealth University and

Yury Boshyk

Chairman, Global Executive Learning Network, and the Annual Global Forum on Executive Development and Business Driven Action Learning

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

✓ uow

List of Tables, Figures, Boxes and Illustrations	xii
Preface	xiv
Acknowledgements	xix
Notes on Contributors	xxi

Part I Sector Overviews

1	Action Learning in Health care	3
	Cheryl Brook
	Introduction	3
	Background: The U.K. National Health Service	4
	Action learning practice in the NHS	5
	Some limitations and difficulties	7
	Action learning in an NHS Trust: A case example	8
	Discussion	11
	Conclusion	12
2	Action Learning in Education	15
	Robert L. Dilworth
	Introduction	15
	The context within which action learning occurs in the United States	16
	Action learning in secondary school systems	17
	Action learning programs in higher education	23
	Conclusion	38
3	Transformative Action Learning in the U.S. Government	43
	Robert Kramer and James L. Kelly
	Introduction	43
	The US$4 billion comprehensive exam	45
	The problem	46
	Enter Chinook	47
	Results	49
	Transformative learning	53
4	Action Learning in the Military	55
	Robert L. Dilworth
	Introduction	55
	Some case examples	56
	The Army as a learning organization	61
	Conclusion	66

5	Action Learning in the Business World: Past, Present, and Future	68
	Yury Boshyk
	What kind of action learning? And what does the term mean?	68
	Reg Revans and “traditional” action learning in the business world	69
	The “Americanization” of action learning in the business community	71
	Action Reflection Learning™ (ARL): Swedish and U.S. Variations	74
	Business driven action learning	77
	The future of action learning in the business community	86
6	Action Learning, Community, and Civil Society	99
	Verna J. Willis
	Introduction	99
	Identifying agents of action learning	100
	Civil society	102
	Community development	103
	Action learning and “development work”	104
	The critical realism of action learning	105
	Further examples	109
	Action learning as a beacon for civil society	110
	Conclusion	112

Part II Themes

7	The Practical Primacy of Questions in Action Learning	119
	Marilee G. Adams
	Introduction	119
	Action learning and the primacy of questions	120
	Revans on learning and questions	121
	The power and purposes of questions	123
	The importance of questions “versus” answers	123
	Questions, learning, and reflection	125
	Linking questions with action and results	125
	A team discovers missed questions	128
	Conclusion	129
8	Process in Action Learning Teams: Similarities and Variations	131
	Michael Hoge and John W. Bing
	Introduction	131
	The nature of teams	131

Action learning teams as a distinct subcategory of teams	133
Examining process within action learning teams	134
Process as mediated by culture on action learning teams	138
Conclusion	142
9 Action Learning and Organization Development	144
W. Warner Burke and Debra A. Noumair
Problems of definition	144
Comparing action learning and organization development	147
A special case of action learning	149
Conclusion	152
10 Action Learning and the Learning Organization: Building Learning Capacity in Individuals, Groups and Organizations	154
Judy O'Neil, Karen E. Watkins and Victoria J. Marsick
Our approach to action learning	155
Individual level of the learning organization	155
Team level of the learning organization	158
Organization level of the learning organization	160
Conclusion	163
11 Action Learning and Action Research	166
Verna J. Willis
A few important fundamentals	166
Pioneer figures and their orientations	168
Exemplars for comparison of action learning and action research	171
Easy lessons from the examples	174
Charting "news of difference" between action learning and action research	175
12 Future Search as Action Learning	179
Marvin R. Weisbord and Sandra Janoff
Kurt Lewin's legacy	179
A short history of future search principles	181
Future search as a learning model	183
A philosophy and theory of facilitating	185
Future search as a cross-cultural phenomenon	185
Case study: Children of Southern Sudan	185
Results and critical factors	188
Learning from a learning event	189
Crossing cultures is counterintuitive, unless...	189
Conclusion: A comment on the "future"	190

Part III Perspectives

13	Action Learning through the Lens of Action Learners	195
	Robert L. Dilworth, Verna J. Willis, Karen M. Videtec, Mariana Garban, Lillie Graham Sapp, Marvin R. Weisbord, Fran Szabo, Judy O'Neil, Victoria J. Marsick, Karen E. Watkins, Sandra Janoff and Isabel Rimanoczy
	My friend Reg	195
	Experiencing action learning (my thoughts)	197
	Adventures in action learning	199
	A view from Romania	201
	Action learning for a lifetime	202
	Learning by doing, doing by learning	203
	My experiences with action learning	205
	Our experiences in action learning	207
	My action learning experiences	208
	Revens' legacy	209
	Experience of action learners	209
14	From the Frying Pan to the Fire – And Back Again:
	An Action Learning Story from General Electric	211
	Stephen R. Mercer
	Part I: The frying pan	211
	Part II: The fire	217
	Epilogue: The frying pan again	223
15	My Experience with Business Driven Action Learning	226
	Alasdair Philip
	Foundations of learning	227
	Our organization	227
	"Outside-in" perspectives	228
	Our external environment	228
	Value creation	228
	Leadership	229
16	Making Space for Reflection in Action Learning	231
	Geert R. Egger
	So, what is the problem?	232
	Making space for reflection	235
	Conclusion: A final reflection	240
17	Action Reflection Learning: Tales of Two Journeys	242
	Isabel Rimanoczy and Victoria J. Marsick
	Victoria Marsick's story	243
	Isabel Rimanoczy's story	247

18	Looking to the Future of Action Learning	256
	Robert L. Dilworth
	Introduction	256
	The strategic view	257
	The basic context	258
	Meeting the challenge	259
	The issue of problem diagnosis versus implementation of solutions	266
	A suggested future state for action learning	269
	Conclusion	274
	Appendix: Robert L. Dilworth: His Life and Legacy (1936–2009)	276
	Verna J. Willis
	Glossary	286
	Robert L. Dilworth
	Index	295