Contents

Preface xi
Introduction xvii

I. Leadership from the Top 1
   Leadership in the Service and Information Age 2
   Buggy-Whip Accounting Is Obsolete 4
   Industrial-Age Myopia Is Not Dead by a Long Shot 7
   What to Look for in a Customer-Focused Leader 8
   Where to Find a Customer-Focused Leader? 9
   What Customer-Focused Leaders Must Do 10
   A Customer Focus versus a Blurred Vision 15
   The Principal Leadership Challenge: Overcoming Inertia 16
   Streamlining the Organization for a Customer Focus 20
   Leaders Must Live Their Own Mandate 24
   The Greatest Service Story Ever Told 26
   Coming Full Circle 28

II. A Customer Focus Trumps All Other Strategies 29
   The Winds of Change Favor the Customer 30
   Strategic Planning Cannot Yield Strategy 32
   Strategic Planning Is All about Control 38
   Finding the Customer's Voice 39
Customer Survey Design and Administration 44
Bring in the Planners 48
No Customer, No Strategy 50
Ignoring the Customer Is Fraught with Peril 55

III. The Service Ethic 57
What Is Ethical Behavior? 58
Ethics in Business 59
Regulation Is Not a Proxy for Ethical Behavior 62
The Service Ethic in Action 64
Service Is a Non-Zero-Sum Game 66
Customers Are First 69
Quality as an Ethical Standard 71
Service: Quality versus Quantity 74
Customers as Partners 75
A Partnership Can Be Sabotaged by Legalisms 78
Communication: A Key Weapon of the Ethical Provider 81
Customers from Hell! 84
Service Is Not Surrender 85
Is This the End of Personal Service? 87

IV. Power to the Front Line 89
Frontline Skills That Make a Difference 90
Vetting the Frontline Worker’s Background 95
Aligning Frontline Performance to the Service Ethic 97
Supporting the Front Line with Education and Training 102
Deploying Computer Systems That Inform the Front Line 105
Business to Business: Enter Service Management 108
The Customer Account Manager 109
Account Manager in Name Only 112