

The Rise of Planning in Industrial America, 1865–1914

Richard Adelstein

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
 Introduction: the tripod of power	 1
The engineers' revolution	1
Starry night	7
 PART I
Islands of conscious power	15
 1 Organizing production	17
Order and planning	17
Dividing labor	23
Firms	31
 2 Planning	40
The planner's problem	40
Planning for efficiency	47
Solutions	52
 3 Contracts in performance	64
Contracts and capabilities	64
Firms as social actors	71
Firms as persons	78
 Interlude: choosing the future	 88

PART II

Redwoods in the garden	93
4 Taylor's bargain	95
The mechanical firm	95
The hammer of science	104
Combinations	115
5 Antitrusts	128
Competition and monopoly	128
Bigness and autonomy	139
Autonomy and efficiency	149
6 Deciding for bigness	161
Contracts in restraint	161
Rules of reason	172
The gentle enslavement of our people	183
7 Contracts at liberty	196
Entities	196
The breath of life	207
Liberty of contract	218
Epilogue: "war is the health of the state"	230
Bibliography	240
Index	254