The Competition between National Brands and Store Brands: Models, Insights, Implications, and Future Research Directions

Raj Sethuraman
Southern Methodist University
USA
rsethura@cox.smu.edu

Jagmohan Raju
University of Pennsylvania
USA
rajuj@wharton.upenn.edu

the essence of knowledge
Boston – Delft
Contents

1 Introduction 1

2 Framework for Classifying Research Studies 3

3 Compilation and Classification of Research Studies 9

4 Models with One Manufacturer and One Retailer 13
   4.1 Base Model 13
   4.2 Incorporating Store Brand Strength 20
   4.3 Incorporating Costs 21
   4.4 Incorporating Advertising 33
   4.5 Incorporating Price Promotions 43
   4.6 Incorporating Shelf Space 49
   4.7 Incorporating Additional Channel 51

5 Two or More National Brands and One Retailer 55
   5.1 Base Model with Prices Only 55
   5.2 Incorporating Store Brand Positioning 58
   5.3 Incorporating Advertising 64
   5.4 Incorporating Price Promotion 66
   5.5 Incorporating Dual Branding 67
6 Model with One Manufacturer and Two Retailers 69
6.1 Base Model with Prices only 69

7 Multiple Manufacturers and Multiple Retailers 75
7.1 Models with Prices Only 75

8 National Brand Decisions — Manufacturer 79
8.1 National Brand Product Decisions 79
8.2 National Brand Wholesale Price 80
8.3 National Brand Distribution 82
8.4 National Brand Promotions 82

9 National Brand Decisions — Retailer (NR) 87
9.1 National Brand Retail Price 87
9.2 National Brand Distribution by Retailers 88
9.3 National Brand Promotions 88

10 Store Brand Decisions — Retailer 91
10.1 Store Brand Introduction 91
10.2 Store Brand Product 95
10.3 Store Brand Price 96
10.4 Store Brand Distribution 97
10.5 Store Brand Promotion 97

11 Store Brand Decisions — Manufacturer 99
11.1 Dual Branding 99

12 Future Research 103
12.1 Future Research on Model Structure 103
12.2 Future Research on Model Outcomes 104