

Business Creation Stability: Why is it so Hard to Increase Entrepreneurship?

Paul D. Reynolds

Aston Business School, Birmingham, UK
pauldavidsonreynolds@gmail.com

now

the essence of knowledge

Boston — Delft

Contents

1	Introduction	3
2	National Variation in Business Creation	11
3	Economic Development and Business Creation	17
4	Business Creation and Economic Growth	21
5	Within Country Consistency	25
5.1	Cross-year correlations	25
5.2	Temporal stability	26
6	National Characteristics and Business Creation	41
6.1	Measures of business creation	44
6.2	National characteristics	45
6.3	Economic characteristics	50
6.4	Growth	51
6.5	Business structure	52
6.6	Government role in the economy	53
6.7	Population capacity	57
6.8	Cultural, social context	60

7	Predicting National Business Creation (Link A)	67
8	Predicting Individual Participation in Business Creation (Link B)	73
9	Exploring Readiness for Entrepreneurship (Link C)	85
10	Stability of National Values	91
11	National Values and Business Creation	95
11.1	National Values and Income Inequality	100
12	Conclusions and Implications	109
12.1	Short term implications	111
12.2	Long term implications	114
12.3	Future work	117
A	Appendix A	119
B	Appendix B: Sources of National Attributes	123
C	Appendix C: Values of National Attributes	137
D	Appendix D: Development of Multi-Level Models	153
	References	155