Industrialising Rural India
Land, policy and resistance

Edited by Kenneth Bo Nielsen and Patrik Oskarsson
Contents

List of illustrations ix
List of contributors x
Acknowledgements xi

PART I
Introduction 1

1 Industrialising rural India 3
PATRIK OSKARSSON AND KENNETH BO NIELSEN

PART II
Policy evolution 19

2 ‘The dog that didn’t bark’ (very loudly) – large-scale development projects with little protest in Nehru’s India 21
JØRGEN DIGE PEDERSEN

3 From state-led development to embedded neoliberalism: India’s industrial and social policies in comparative perspective 40
STEIN SUNDESTØL ERIKSEN

4 ‘Should the son of a farmer always remain a farmer?’ The ambivalence of industrialisation and resistance in West Bengal 63
SARASIJ MAJUMDER AND KENNETH BO NIELSEN
PART III
Governing nature and society 83

5 Coal as national development in India: transforming landscapes and social relations in the quest for energy security 85
KUNTALA LAHIRI-DUTT

6 A different story of coal: the power of power in Northeast India 107
BENGT G. KARLSSON

7 The nature of bauxite mining and Adivasi livelihoods in the industrialisation of Eastern India 123
PATRIK OSKARSSON

8 Resource extraction in Jharkhand's West Singhbhum: the continuing marginalisation of Adivasi livelihoods despite decentralisation 140
SIDDHARTH SAREEN

PART IV
The ambiguity of resistance 159

9 Rural industry, the Forest Rights Act, and the performance(s) of proof 161
PRAKRUTI RAMESH

10 'We will need a passport to enter the site': envisioning land, industrialisation, and the state in Goa 179
HEATHER PLUMRIDGE BEDI

Index 192