Shadow Banking in China

An Opportunity for Financial Reform

EDITED BY
ANDREW SHENG
NG CHOW SOON

WILEY
CONTENTS

Foreword by Victor Fung ix

Foreword by Liu Mingkang xiii

Acknowledgments xv

About the Editors xvii

Executive Summary xix
  Key Findings and Policy Recommendations xxii

CHAPTER 1
  Introduction 1
  Andrew Sheng
  1.1 References 16

CHAPTER 2
  Shadow Banking in the Global Context 17
  Cathleen Yi Tin
  2.1 Introduction 17
  2.2 What is Shadow Banking? 18
  2.3 Size of the Global Shadow Banking Industry 20
  2.4 Factors for the Rise in Global Shadow Banking 23
  2.5 Interconnectedness Between Shadow Banks and the Formal Banking Sector 26
  2.6 The Nature of Shadow Banking Differs Across Countries 28
  References 32
CHAPTER 3
Shadow Banking within the National Balance Sheet 35
Jodie Hu and Andrew Sheng
3.1 Introduction 35
3.2 Overview of the Chinese National Balance Sheet 37
3.3 Who Owes What in China’s National Balance Sheet? 44
3.4 Zooming in on China’s Sectoral Balance Sheets 47
3.5 Shadow Banks within the National Balance Sheet 74
3.6 Evaluation of the National Balance Sheet Approach 74
3.7 Basic Analytical Conclusions and Policy Recommendations from the NBS Approach 78
References 80

CHAPTER 4
Shadow Banking with Chinese Characteristics 83
Wang Yao
4.1 Introduction 83
4.2 Nature and Scale of Shadow Banking in China 86
4.3 Factors Spurring the Growth of Shadow Banks in China 98
4.4 Different Channels of China’s Shadow Banking 105
4.5 Interconnectivity between Shadow Banking and the Official Banking System 119
4.6 Shadow Banking’s Impact and Regulatory Implications 121
4.7 Conclusion 129
References 129

CHAPTER 5
Inherent Risks in Chinese Shadow Banking 133
Wang Yao and Jodie Hu
5.1 Introduction 133
5.2 Getting to the Heart of the Problem – the Underlying Asset Quality 137
5.3 Non-Financial Corporate Sector (excluding Real Estate Companies) 140
5.4 Real Estate Companies 149
5.5 Local Government Financing Platforms (LGFPs) 154
5.6 Non-performing Assets in the Shadow Banking System 161
References 168
CHAPTER 6
Impact of Technology on China's Financial System 171
Li Sai Yau and Cathleen Yi Tin
6.1 Introduction 171
6.2 The Rise of e-commerce in China and its Implications 173
6.3 The Rise of e-finance in China and its Implications 175
6.4 The Role of Technological Innovation in China's Transformation 185
6.5 Rethinking Conventional Financial Regulation and Development 187
6.6 Implications for the Financial Services Industry 190
6.7 Conclusion 191
References 192

CHAPTER 7
Implications for Reform Agenda 195
Andrew Sheng
7.1 Introduction 195
7.2 Ongoing Shadow Banking Reforms in China 198
7.3 Financial Reforms – Looking Beyond Shadow Banking 201
7.4 Immediate-Term Reform Priorities – Diagnosis and Damage Control 202
7.5 Loss Allocation – Medium-Term Measures 204
7.6 Mapping the Future of China's Financial System: A Potential Long-term Blueprint 208
7.7 Conclusion and Suggestions for Future Research 213
References 214

CHAPTER 8
Conclusion 217
Andrew Sheng
8.1 Introduction 217
8.2 Shadow Banking with Chinese Characteristics 220
8.3 Unique Opportunity for Reform 222
8.4 Reform Agenda Going Forward 223
8.5 Immediate-term Reform Priorities 224
8.6 Long-Term Reforms: A Financial Blueprint 224
APPENDIX A
Evolution of International Financial Crises – Lessons for China 227

Li Sai Yau
A.1 Introduction 227
A.2 Comparing the Evolution of International Financial Crises 228
A.3 The Subprime Mortgage and ESDC Crises: Lessons for China 234
A.4 International Comparison of Nonperforming Loans (NPLs) 235
A.5 Conclusion 244
References 244

Index 247