Alexander Buhmann

Measuring Country Image

Theory, Method, and Effects

Contents

List of tables9
List of figures
Acl	Acknowledgements
Short summary
1	Introduction
	1.1		untry image as a target construct in IPR and PD research
	1.2		rata: researching the constitution and effects of country
				19
		1.2.1 I	Desiderata in theory	19
		1.2.2 I	Desiderata in measures	20
		1.2.3 I	Desiderata in methods	21
	1.3	Approa	ich of the study	22
			Aim of the project
			Research questions and study structure
		1.3.3 E	Epistemological remark	26
2	Tov	ards an	integrative model of the country image	27
	2.1	Introdu	ction	27
			research perspectives
			Business studies
			2.2.1.1 Country-of-origin research
			2.2.1.2 Nation branding
			Social psychology
			2.2.2.1 Intergroup relations
		2	2.2.2.2 Collective identity research	32
			Political science
			2.2.3.1 International relations
		2	2.3.2 Political anthropology	33
		2.2.4	Communication science	34

		2.2.4.1 The general communication science perspective
		2.2.4.2 The communication management perspective	34
	2.3	Applying the perspective of communication management	35
		2.3.1 Towards a basic terminological framework	36
		2.3.2 Systemizing concepts of country image, reputation,
		brand and identity	37
		2.3.2.1 Country image	38
		2.3.2.2 Country identity	39
		2.3.2.3 Country reputation	39
		2.3.2.4 Country brand	40
		2.3.3 Conclusion	40
	2.4	An integrative model of the country image	40
		2.4.1 National identity as a basic framework	41
		2.4.2 Country image as attitude	41
		2.4.3 Dimensionality of the country image: the 4D Model	43
	2.5	Conclusion	45
_			40
3	A V	ariance-based approach for PR measurement and evaluation	49
3	A v a 3.1	ariance-based approach for PR measurement and evaluation Introduction	49 49
3	3.1 3.2	ariance-based approach for PR measurement and evaluation Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research	49
3	3.1	Introduction	49 51
3	3.1	Introduction	49 51 53
3	3.1	Introduction	49 51 53 54
3	3.1	Introduction	49 51 53 54 55
3	3.1	Introduction	49 51 53 54 55
3	3.1 3.2	Introduction	49 51 53 54 55 55
3	3.1 3.2	Introduction	49 51 53 54 55 56 57
3	3.1 3.2	Introduction	49 51 53 55 55 56 57
3	3.1 3.2	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions	49 51 53 55 55 56 57 58
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions Applying PLS-SEM in public relations evaluation	49 51 53 55 55 56 57 59
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction	49 51 53 55 55 56 57 59 60
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions Applying PLS-SEM in public relations evaluation 3.4.1 Developing reflective and formative measurement models 3.4.2 Research design and sample structure	49 51 53 54 55 55 57 59 60 60
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions Applying PLS-SEM in public relations evaluation 3.4.1 Developing reflective and formative measurement models 3.4.2 Research design and sample structure 3.4.3 Model Evaluation with PLS-SEM	49 51 53 54 55 55 57 59 60 63 63
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions Applying PLS-SEM in public relations evaluation 3.4.1 Developing reflective and formative measurement models 3.4.2 Research design and sample structure 3.4.3 Model Evaluation with PLS-SEM 3.4.3.1 Formative measurement model evaluation	49 51 53 55 55 57 58 60 63 63
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions Applying PLS-SEM in public relations evaluation 3.4.1 Developing reflective and formative measurement models 3.4.2 Research design and sample structure 3.4.3 Model Evaluation with PLS-SEM 3.4.3.1 Formative measurement model evaluation 3.4.3.2 Reflective measurement model evaluation	49 51 53 55 55 56 57 60 63 63
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions Applying PLS-SEM in public relations evaluation 3.4.1 Developing reflective and formative measurement models 3.4.2 Research design and sample structure 3.4.3 Model Evaluation with PLS-SEM 3.4.3.1 Formative measurement model evaluation 3.4.3.2 Reflective measurement model evaluation 3.4.3.3 Structural model evaluation	49 51 53 54 55 56 57 60 63 63 65 69
3	3.1 3.2 3.3	Introduction Basics of PLS-SEM and what it can do for PR research 3.2.1 Modeling flexibility and predictive focus 3.2.2 Handling high model complexity 3.2.3 Sample size requirements 3.2.4 Using formative measures Towards a structural model 3.3.1 Conceptualizing the multidimensional construct 3.3.2 Trust as an outcome variable 3.3.3 Trust and behavioral intentions Applying PLS-SEM in public relations evaluation 3.4.1 Developing reflective and formative measurement models 3.4.2 Research design and sample structure 3.4.3 Model Evaluation with PLS-SEM 3.4.3.1 Formative measurement model evaluation 3.4.3.2 Reflective measurement model evaluation	49 51 53 54 55 56 57 60 63 63 65 69 71

4	Fro	m model to measurement
	4.1	Introduction
	4.2	The 'state of the art'
		4.2.1 Models and measures in the central research fields
		4.2.2 A synthesis of central research gaps
	4.3	From model to measurement
		4.3.1 The 4D Model of the country image
		4.3.2 Defining the epistemic structure of the country image	88
		4.3.3 The country image's effect on stakeholder behavior	89
		4.3.4 Operationalization of the construct
		4.3.5 Method	92
	4.4	Results
		4.4.1 Measurement model	92
		4.4.2 Structural relationships	98
	4.5	Conclusion
5	The	constitution and effects of country image and identity	. 101
		Research gaps and research questions
	5.2	Towards an integrative framework of country image and identity	. 102
		Methodology
		5.3.1 Towards measurement: formative or reflective indicators?	. 106
		5.3.2 Operationalization: developing measurement models
		5.3.3 Method
	5.4	Results
		5.4.1 Measurement model
		5.4.2 Structural relationships
	5.5	Conclusion
	٥.٠	Contraction
6	Cor	eclusion	119
•	6.1
		Originality and value
	0.2	6.2.1 Theoretical advances and implications
		6.2.2 Advances and implications in measures	122
		6.2.3 Methodological advances and implications	122
		6.2.4 Advances and implications for IPR and PD practice	122
	63	Limitations
	0.5	6.3.1 Theoretical framework
		6.3.2 Empirical approach
	61	Outlook and future directions
	0.4	OULIOOK AND INTUITE DIFECTIONS	. 140