Contents

List of Tables, Figures and Box  xii
Contributors  xv

Introduction  Changing Nature of Forced Migration: A Vulnerability Framework  1
Sara N. Amin and Varuni Ganepola
Why South and Southeast Asia?  3
Theoretical divides in the study of migration:
The continuum of migrations  4
The vulnerability framework  6
Applying the vulnerability framework to migration dynamics  11
Overview of the book  13

Part I
Climate Change, Development and Security

Chapter 1  Natural Disasters and Forced Migration:
The Case of Tsunami Disaster in Sri Lanka  31
Lakshman Dissanayake
1.1 Introduction  32
1.2 Theoretical underpinning  33
1.3 The setting, data and methods  36
1.4 Reasons for forced migration  39
1.5 Forced migration to resettlement areas  41
1.6 Receptiveness of host community  43
Changing Nature of Forced Migration

1.7 Vulnerability of disaster-induced forced migrants: Women and the elderly 46
1.8 Conclusion 48

Chapter 2 Migration doesn’t have to be a Failure to Adapt: An Escape from Environmental Determinism 55
Francois Gemenne
2.1 Introduction 56
2.2 Common perceptions of environmentally-induced migration 57
2.3 How climate change affects migration patterns 59
2.4 Conclusion: Policy directions for migration as adaptation 63

Chapter 3 Factors Influencing Environmental Induced Migration in Sanjiangyuan Area in China 67
Meng Xiangjing
3.1 Introduction 67
3.2 Basic information 69
3.3 Research questions and methods 73
3.4 Analysis 75
3.5 Policy implication 82
3.6 Conclusion 85

Chapter 4 Forced Displacement in the Tehri Dam Project: Whither Gender? 89
Vandana Asthana
4.1 Introduction 90
4.2 Research methodology 93
4.3 Gender, development and displacement 94
4.4 Gender in the local context, Uttaranchal 96
4.5 Development and displacement in the local context 98
4.6 The process of resettlement 99
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>4.7 Lived experiences of women during pre and post displacement processes</td>
<td>101</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.8 Gender bias in state resettlement policy</td>
<td>107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.9 Conclusion</td>
<td>111</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Part II

Legal and Policy Frameworks

Chapter 5
Immigration, Global Poverty and the Right to Stay

Kieran Oberman

- 5.1 Introduction
- 5.2 The immigration debate
- 5.3 The choice view
- 5.4 The right to stay
- 5.5 The failure to assist as a violation of the right to stay
- 5.6 Conclusion

Chapter 6
Protection without Laws: A Look into the Arbitrariness and Discrimination in Refugee Management in Bangladesh

Uttam Kumar Das

- 6.1 Introduction
- 6.2 The refugees and human rights
- 6.3 Refugees in international law
- 6.4 The 1951 convention and the 1967 protocol: An overview
- 6.5 Regional instruments on refugees
- 6.6 Other international instruments
- 6.7 Refugees and stateless persons in Bangladesh
- 6.8 Laws related to refugees in Bangladesh
- 6.9 Bangladesh’s international commitment to human rights and humanitarian law
- 6.10 The domestic legal framework
- 6.11 The “Refugee Status”: Bangladesh perspective
Changing Nature of Forced Migration

6.12 Issues for Bangladesh regarding non-ratification to the 1951 convention and its 1967 protocol 171
6.13 Search for durable solution 175
6.14 Conclusion 176

Chapter 7 International Law, Forced Migrations and the Responsibility to Protect: Examples of Canada, South and South-East Asia 181
Melissa Jean-Brousseau

7.1 Introduction 182
7.2 The nature of R2P 184
7.3 Why should R2P be aligned with forced migration issues? 193
7.4 The potential of R2P 199
7.5 Asylum: A way to protect civilians from harm 203
7.6 Conclusion 205

Chapter 8 Vulnerability of Migrants and Responsiveness of the State: The Case of Unskilled Migrant Workers in Kerala, India 209
N. Ajith Kumar

8.1 The setting 210
8.2 Methodology 211
8.3 Overview of inter-state migration in Kerala 211
8.4 Vulnerability of migrant workers 213
8.5 Exclusion from local planning 225
8.6 Legal protection 225
8.7 Welfare scheme for migrant workers 228
8.8 Conclusion 232

Chapter 9 Women’s Displacement Experiences: Anthropological Study of Flood IDPs Camp Sukkur, Sindh 237
M. Rafique Wassan and Lutaf Ali Mangrio

9.1 Introduction 238
Contents

9.2 Methodology 241
9.3 Methodological limitations 243
9.4 Literature review 244
9.5 Findings and analysis 248
9.6 Exploring and locating the experiences of displaced lives 250
9.7 Poverty and displacement; women paid the price 254
9.8 Camp life: Feelings of separation, helplessness, insecurity and veiling 255
9.9 Humanitarian assistance: Gendered concerns 257
9.10 Relief activities: Women's representation and decision-making 259
9.11 Women continued carrying multiple burdens in camp 260
9.12 Unmarried daughters: Victims of displacement 261
9.13 Empowerment and change in gender roles 261
9.14 Conclusion 263

Part III
Coping Mechanisms

Chapter 10 Coping Strategies in Bangladesh 271
Meherun Ahmed
10.1 Introduction 271
10.2 Literature review 273
10.3 Organisation of the chapter 276
10.4 Incidence of various income shocks and demographic characteristics of affected households 276
10.5 Various coping strategies adopted by households in Bangladesh 282
10.6 Regression analysis 286
10.7 Conclusion and policy recommendations 289
Part IV

Politics of Belonging, Settlement, and Identity

Chapter 11 A Snapshot Case Study of the Urdu-speaking Internally Displaced Population in Bangladesh

Shujaat Wasty, Shakib Ahsan, Bryn Holmes and Kate Maguire

11.1 Context 296
11.2 Case study 298
11.3 Design considerations and methodology 302
11.4 Background characteristics 305
11.5 Health status and facilities 309
11.6 Conclusion and recommendations 317

Chapter 12 Partial Citizenship and the Construction of Self via Financial Capital: A Case Study of Legal Bank Account for Illegal Burmese Migrant Workers in Thailand

Sustarum Thammaboosadee

12.1 Introduction 325
12.2 The concept of partial citizenship 326
12.3 Making of the economic man: The case of Burmese workers in Thailand 327
12.4 The making of self via financial capital 330
12.5 Concluding remarks 331

Chapter 13 Crossing Borders and Shifting Identities: Afghan Women on Move

Aparna Malaviya

13.1 Introduction 334
13.2 Field area and methodology 336
13.3 Women refugees: Negotiating with the state, care regime and community 338
13.4 Conclusion 351