

Neostructuralism and heterodox thinking in Latin America and the Caribbean in the early twenty-first century

Alicia Bárcena
Antonio Prado
Editors

UNITED NATIONS

Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC)
Santiago, May 2016

Contents

Foreword	13
Introduction	17
Part I
Schools of economic thought and the regional context in the early twenty-first century	29
Chapter I
A time to reflect on opportunities for debate and dialogue between (neo)structuralism and heterodox schools of thought
Esteban Pérez Caldentey	31
Introduction.....	31
A. Economists and the Great Moderation	33
B. The economics of the mainstream: its theoretical underpinnings and economic policy implications	35
C. Criticisms of the mainstream economic paradigm and responses to them	41
D. The structuralist view of economics and the heterodoxy.....	44
E. The methodological approach of neostructuralism and heterodox thought.....	49
F. The external context: centre-periphery and dynamics	53
G. The external context: the centre and periphery and the external constraint	55
H. Structural change, technological progress and innovation.....	62
I. Income distribution.....	64
J. Volatility and instability	65

K. The central role of demand	67
L. The role of the market and the State.....	68
Conclusion	72
Bibliography	73

Chapter II

Latin America and world economic turmoil

José Antonio Ocampo	85
A. Dramatic changes at the international level	86
B. Changes in international trade and the region's technology lag.....	89
C. External financing and underlying world balances	92
D. Is it time for a new strategy?.....	96
Bibliography	100

Chapter III

The recent internationalization of capitalization

Luiz Gonzaga Belluzzo	101
------------------------------------	-----

Part II

Macroeconomics for development	115
--------------------------------------	-----

Chapter IV

Neostructuralism and macroeconomics for development

Ricardo Ffrench-Davis	117
Introduction.....	117
A. The mainstream approach since 1990 and its effects	119
B. Recessionary and regressive asymmetries	123
Conclusions	134
Bibliography	137

Chapter V

Macroeconomics for development in Latin America and the Caribbean: new thoughts on countercyclicality

Daniel Titelman, Esteban Pérez Caldentey	139
Introduction.....	139
A. The long-run performance of Latin America and the Caribbean: high volatility and low growth	142
B. Balance-of-payments dominance	145
C. Volatility also reflects the specific features of the business cycle in Latin America and the Caribbean	148
D. The relationship between the cycle and long-run growth: the real channel (productivity and investment)	153
E. The relationship between the cycle and long-run growth: the financial channel	156
F. Completing the macroeconomics for development blueprint view of countercyclicality	160

Conclusions	163
Bibliography	164
Chapter VI
Towards a Robinsonian interpretation of capital accumulation in Latin America
Juan Alberto Fuentes Knight	167
Introduction	167
A. Joan Robinson's growth theory	168
B. Capital accumulation and the ages of growth in Latin America from 1980 to 2012	181
Conclusions	197
Bibliography	198
Annex	201
Part III
Structural change and production development.....	203
Chapter VII
Productivity and structural change: structuralism and its dialogue with other heterodox currents
Mario Cimoli, Gabriel Porcile	205
Introduction	205
A. Economic growth, specialization and technology	206
B. Microeconomic foundations of learning and convergence	212
C. An example: industrial policy	214
Final remarks	217
Bibliography	218
Chapter VIII
The macro- and microeconomics of natural-resource-based growth
Jorge Katz	223
Introduction	223
A. Reflections on the new macroeconomic policies	227
B. More unfinished business: the long-term sustainability of natural resources.....	231
Final thoughts.....	235
Bibliography	236
Chapter IX
Development patterns and welfare States in Latin America
Luis Bértola	239
Introduction	239
A. Economic growth and natural resources: a long-term perspective.....	240
B. The unequal and interdependent growth of the centre and periphery.....	242

C. Development and welfare States	246
D. Development and the welfare State in Latin America	252
Conclusion	266
Bibliography	268
Part IV
The role of the State	271
Chapter X
Growth, employment and equality: the new role of the State
Robert Boyer	273
Introduction	273
A. Reducing inequality in developed economies with high and stable growth	274
B. The end of the "golden age": the success of market-led regimes and their crises	278
C. The State and economic policy: a new paradigm	285
D. The welfare State and growth	288
E. The consequences of globalization	290
Conclusions	293
Bibliography	295
Chapter XI
Transformation of the State and development paradigms in Latin America
René A. Hernández	299
Introduction	299
A. Concepts of state and development: a number of approaches	300
B. An approach to Latin American development paradigms ...	312
C. An approach to Prebisch's contribution to the current debate	326
Conclusions	329
Bibliography	332
Chapter XII
The State, heterodoxy and the contribution of feminism
Sonia Montaña V.	337
A. The contributions of feminism	338
B. The role of the State, democracy and the economy	340
C. Economics and equality	342
D. Heterodox economics and the role of the State	345
Bibliography	349

Part V

Case studies of major economies in the region.....	351
--	-----

Chapter XIII

Development and macroeconomics: reflections
from the Mexican case

Juan Carlos Moreno-Brid	353
Introduction.....	353
A. Progress, unresolved issues and reverses in Mexican macroeconomic policy over the last three decades	355
B. Some lessons from the international financial crisis on how to apply a macroeconomic policy for development	363
Final reflections	367
Bibliography	373

Chapter XIV

Where next for Brazilian development?

Francisco Eduardo Pires de Souza, João Carlos Ferraz	375
Introduction.....	375
A. Background: from the Real Plan to the external boom.....	377
B. The inclusive growth model: virtues and limitations.....	379
C. (The early signs of) an emerging model	384
D. The underpinnings and challenges of an inclusive and productive development model.....	386
Final reflections	389
Bibliography	391

Chapter XV

Structural change trajectories and industrial policy approaches:
a proposal based on the Argentine experience

Fernando Porta	393
Introduction.....	393
A. Recent manufacturing performance.....	395
B. Limitations of productive specialization	401
C. Industrial policy approaches: towards a post-neoliberal agenda	408
Conclusions	414
Bibliography	415

Author profiles	417
-----------------------	-----

ECLAC recent publications	427
---------------------------------	-----